

September 17th, 2025:

- I don't know the importance of Ambassadors in different countries.
- I don't know how trade agreements are created and what they mean.
- I don't know how countries decide who to give foreign aid to.
- I don't know how public opinion can change a country's foreign policy.
- I don't know how organizations like the UN (United Nations) influence countries.
- I don't know how countries respond to global health crises together.
- I don't know the effect of immigration policies on foreign relations.
- I don't know how human rights issues influence diplomatic relationships.
- I don't know the role of languages in communication between nations.
- I don't know how events from the past are still influencing how countries interact today.

I have determined from my list of 10 "don't knows", I need to know how events from the past are still influencing how countries interact today. This is important for many reasons because of certain issues between countries. I'd like to know if there were events in the past that affected different issues. It could be why wars between Russia and Ukraine or Israel and Iran are still happening. If there is, it can explain a lot why certain countries have problems with each other. This could send me to dive deeper into my research on how certain issues are happening due to past events.
