Reading Comprehension-

The Cherokee Nation

The Cherokee Nation is one of the biggest Native American groups in the United States.

A long time ago, the Cherokee lived in the south part of the USA, like Georgia, North Carolina, and Tennessee. Today, many Cherokee people live in Oklahoma, where the Cherokee Nation has settled down in.

The Cherokee had their own society of hunters and farmers.
They grew corn, beans, and squash. They also hunted animals like deer and bear.

Cherokee houses were made of wood and mud. Their villages were often near rivers.
A Cherokee man named Sequoyah made a writing system for the Cherokee language in the early 1800s. This helped Cherokee people read and write in their own language.

In the 1830s, President Andrew Jackson told the Cherokee they must leave their homes in the Southeast. They had to move to Oklahoma.
Today, the Cherokee Nation has schools, hospitals, and cultural programs.
Cherokee people are proud of their language and traditions, and they are part of modern American life
