Who's we? I never supported him. He's a politician making political moves. Not even sure this should be considered news. Also, I don't even disagree with this order. So...

Thanks!

So I had time to read through this and think I get a lot of it. After understanding the #STAR concept, thought I'd post this short video explaining who I am and ways I can volunteer:
[video link]
Basically, I've been a small business owner for some time now. So pretty much already a public identity to a degree. If there's anything I can do to help organize #ESCROW projects let me know!

Donating money to M.A.P. Participants Next Week
#BODY
Need a sponsor for this. Artemis is first one I've seen even #STAR themselves so I'm fine with that, but if someone else wants to, we can always use more public people.

Basically, I'm going to split $20 between top 3 contributors next week based on words worth of content. So Sunday through Saturday, then payment will be sent a week after Saturday.

New Rule to Change How #ESCROW tag operates
#BODY
I suggest we change the #ESCROW rules to have a #FUNDS tag, that each time someone adds money to the escrow account, the escrow person posts a % funded, like "#FUNDS 50%" kind of like GoFundMe or whatever. Then, when it's completely funded we use the #FUNDED tag.

#BLOCK

I'm going to block this. If you think my reasoning is bad, certainly willing to listen.

The #ESCROW tag is a base tag. It needs to be kept simple so everyone knows how it works. People can still do what you're talking about informally by simply describing the project parameters in the #BODY tag when they post the project. #ESCROW rules are already complicated, and I'm against making them moreso. If anything, if we saw people doing this consistently, perhaps, maybe (big maybe) we could make a separate tag that does something like this. Like a completely separate crowd-funding tag.

But as it is, if Artemis wanted to post %'s for multi-source funding, nothing stopping her. The rules are there for cohesion of process, not to try to systematize every innovation.

Great point David313. Over-systematizing definitely bad. Gotta remember what it's like to be a beginner. It took me a few hours to kind of read through and unerstand everything myself.

This M.A.P. is only 7 weeks old. I have a public folder with old reports here:

I counted 12 a few weeks ago, and I think since then only 4 new people have M.A.P. posted, and that includes you, Artemis.

Speaking of reports, guys, remember to use your #RESULT tags for your items. Don't force other people to do it for you at the end of the week. For instance, Artemis, this #ASK item will need a result now that you've gotten your 3 #ANSWERS. A simple "question was answered" and maybe whether it was helpful or whatever. Remember, any item you create, YOU should be the default for creating a #RESULT.

David313, do we put a #RESULT down for an item/project when it's not finished/long term?

EchoHomer, absolutely. Definitely make a #RESULT if it's long term. All items get recoded into the new week, and a result (in the case of long term items) is like a weekly status report. So #RESULT doesn't really mean "final" result, really means results "this week".
