

Mohigan, the developer and manager of famous entertainment resorts in the U.S. and elsewhere, is excited to announce in 2006 that the first destination to bring games to Pennsylvania will now be known as Mohican Pennsylvania.

"We recently refreshed our company name from Mohegan Gaming & Entertainment to Mohegan," said Ray Pinault, CEO of Mohegan. "The new title is truly a strategic decision that encapsulates our capabilities and values, as many partners, stakeholders, and valuable guests often refer to our brand as 'Mohegan'. We have also rebranded destinations like Pennsylvania to create synergy across our Mohican portfolio, especially as we continue to grow in line with the Mohican tribe's vision."

The new name change follows the launch of Project Starlight, which will soon include the completion of a $10 million renovation to 237-room hotels in Mohican Pennsylvania. Other properties enhanced as part of Project Starlight include a new bar with a great entertainment calendar and a live music venue, Hive Taffhouse, a variety of flat screens for large games, over 20 beer options and a full dining menu. Hive Taffhouse is also home to a top golf swing suite where guests can play virtual golf on the well-known PGA course and try other activities such as the quarterback challenge. A new season of outdoor terrace bars (Ember's Terrace) also opened last summer and quickly became a hot spot to enjoy live music, relax in fire pit, play grass games and drink top quality wine.

"There's so much to get excited about as the new year approaches, and that excitement comes from a dedicated team and leadership," said Anthony Kaluch, president and GM of Mohican. "With the new name, renovated hotels, new attractions, and the unrivaled guest service that has set a model for our brand and all Mohican properties, we're excited for the next phase of Mohican Pennsylvania."
