

My Darling Dad,

I just cannot explain what I went through when I saw you taking your last breath in the hospital [mention the number of years] years ago. The entire world went upside down for me. I saw my mother and little brother crying. He had lost his father at such an early age. He had not even finished his High School Diploma at that point in time.

It was quite a challenging task to counsel a young teenager. I was just married then. The struggle had just begun for all of us. Everything was not actually easy for us. I had to shuttle between my husband's place and your house, dad, to take care of my mother and my younger brother. But I could feel your presence every moment to give me strength to bear the grief of departing you and taking charge of the responsibilities of life.

I know that from higher above, you are always blessing us and helping us to meet the challenges of life and expand the family. I just wanted to share the good news that my brother had graduated with an engineering degree and working in a reputed company and getting married next month to a lovely, educated, and cultured girl.

It is also a matter of surprise for all of us to find my son who is your grandson and has actually inherited your features and habits.

He came to this world when you were no more. I really regret my son who did not meet his maternal grandfather. Dad, I do believe that you too might be regretting not being able to meet and play with your grandson.

Dad, you were my best friend then and so still you are the best friend for me.

With love and regards,

From Your Daughter,
