Visual Descriptions for Gallery 1: Wall Collages

Flagging color study #4

Two pieces of clear plexiglass smattered with screws press a translucent blue surgical mesh atop neon yellow mesh fabric. The mesh fabric’s raised rubber anti-slip pattern faintly shows under the creased blue mesh. Towards the lower center a screw with a rubber washer pulls and twists the fabrics into folds. Beside it is a ghost of printed text.

Flagging color study #1

Mounted on a white wall, a square piece of gray translucent plexiglass is drilled slightly askew, trapping several overlapping materials that spill beyond its edges: a paragraph of printed text on clear acetate, a navy blue bandana that drapes and hangs over the plexi, and a piece of dark blue mesh with a visible rubber anti-slip pattern.

Flagging color study #3

On a white wall, a layered arrangement combines a folded gray bandana, a sheet of soft pink fabric, and a piece of yellow plexiglass that is drilled to the wall and traps everything into place. Behind and beneath the plexi, a translucent pink mesh with raised anti-slip patterns and a yellow hospital-style anti-slip sock protrude, creating an uneven, draped composition. A paragraph of printed text on clear acetate extends out from behind the plexiglass, partially visible through the overlapping materials.

Untitled (drain)

A semitranslucent blue rubber drain warps between where a white meets a wooden floor. The holes in the drain mimic the grid of the suspended rubber net.
