Michael Jackson is on the verge of agreeing a huge comeback tour.

The King Of Pop has told fans that plans for his big stage return next year are well under way.

And he is lining up a 30-date tour taking in 30 cities around the world.

Jackson is currently based in Las Vegas, where he is recording material for a new album at The Palms casino resort.

And the... singer has now flown to Los Angeles to discuss details of his comeback with top music execs.

...Now this huge tour looks set to put him back on the pop map.

With his return imminent, the Thriller star left his mask and other face-hiding apparatus at home as he was pictured shopping in Hollywood.

...Jackson revealed his concert plans to fans before leaving for LA this week.

One follower revealed: "Michael said he wasn't doing a Vegas residency but was going on a world tour, taking in 30 cities next year.

"He said he wanted to do it for his kids. He wants them to see what he does, and he wants to take them on the road.

"He said he was on his way to Los Angeles to finalise the details."

Jackson's three children — Prince Michael, Prince Michael II and Paris — were not even born when he did his last major tour in 1996.

He was rumored to be in negotiations to sign up for a lucrative residency at one of Las Vegas's top casinos — but has opted instead to go on the globe-trotting tour so more fans could see the show.

The past ten years have seen Jackson plagued with financial difficulties.

But even if he's a penny short of the full shilling, he still has some of the most devoted fans in pop and could sell out any venue many times over.

That should get the cash rolling in again...
