

This is an archival forum from the FamilySearch Wiki Contributors' Corner forum

12.04.2011, 07:49

jamestanner

Forums Facelift

I made the transition over from the old login to the new without any difficulty. I like the new look of the site, but I am concerned that the whole Forums site has such low visibility. I suggest that we put a link on the Wiki home page to the Forums site besides the one in the Community list of links. Maybe something announcing the new site? Any interest in raising the awareness of the Forums? 🍷

James Tanner

<http://genealogysstar.blogspot.com>

12.04.2011, 08:58

ccsmith

Forums link

I agree. I've suggested that in the past and that it should be across the top along with Learn, FamilySearch Centers, etc.

13.04.2011, 17:46

ccsmith

Forums link

I agree. I've suggested that in the past and that it should be across the top along with Learn, FamilySearch Centers, etc.

13.04.2011, 17:46

barbjones1

I also agree with you - There isn't enough emphasis placed on Forums - and that the idea ccsmith placed should be made manifest.

Putting a link to Forums across the top of the FS pages, would be an ideal way of promoting this.

youknowwho

FamilySearch Patron Services

14.04.2011, 09:37

VasquezJL

I agree, and it looks like some others agree too - it's been brought up on the "Share an idea" pages. Go here to add your support by clicking on the "I like this idea" button:

http://getsatisfaction.com/familysea...to_find_forums

Would anyone like to make a Help page for the forums so that if people hit the Wiki they could find a page about the forums and how to get there? With lots of screen shots? 😊