Abstract:
Abstract is a summary of the contents of a scientific paper such as a research article, thesis, dissertation, in-depth analysis of a particular subject, etc. that is intended to help a reader to be able to easily and quickly understand the purpose of writing. Abstract is written in English, Century (11 pt) preferably between 200-300 words. The abstract should be clear, concise, and descriptive. This abstract should provide a brief introduction to the problem, objective of paper, followed by a statement regarding the methodology if the manuscript is taken from research report and a brief summary of results.

Keywords: 3-5 words

The introduction

The preliminary must contain (brief and successive) general background and literature review as the basis of research questions, scientific article reports, major research problems, and hypotheses. At the end of the introduction, the purpose of article writing must be stated.

Research methods

This method is applied to solve problems, including analytical methods. The methods used in solving research problems are explained in this section.

Discussion and Results

This section consists of the results of research and discussion. The results obtained from these studies must be supported by sufficient data. The results of research and discoveries must be the answers or research hypotheses previously stated in the introduction.

Quotations/citations using Zotero or Mendeley tools are carried out in the form of a Bodynote with the American Psychological Association format. APA Style edisi 7.

Conclusion

The conclusion is the final section which contains conclusions and suggestions. The conclusion will be the answer to the hypothesis, the purpose of research and research findings. Conclusions should not only contain repetition of results and discussion. This should be a summary of the results of the study as the author expects in the research objectives or hypothesis. As for, suggestions contain things related to further ideas from the research.

Reference

All references used in the article must be listed in this section. All references used must be taken from primary sources (scientific journals and at least 80% of all references) published in the last ten years. Each article must have a reference of at least ten references.

The author is expected to quote several articles from the Nurani Journal. All data presented or citations in articles taken from other authors' articles must attach reference sources. References must use reference management applications such as Mendeley, Bodynote, or Zotero. The writing format used in the Nurani Journal follows the format applied by APA 7th Edition (American Psychological Association).
