Long Bio

Vivianne raised her daughter on her own from the age of 13 months. She worked more than one job and operated home-office businesses, including a small publishing company—before the era of cell phones and Google.

Her first book, Tender Moments: Diary of a First-time Mother received an IBPA Benjamin Franklin Silver Award, in the category of nonfiction literature. A passion project, containing the first year of a journal written to her daughter; kept from shortly before birth to age one; a gift of memory of her early days and Vivianne's feelings of becoming, and being, a Mom.

Vivianne's subsequent books were technical business titles teaching online marketing strategies and tactics for small businesses. As years progressed, through her cancer treatments, business demands on top of her nursing career became too consuming. It was time to refer-out her clients to other providers and close the marketing and publishing businesses.

Fast-forward ten years: Vivianne retired from nursing and now writes books for children, a series of adventure and mystery stories across international settings and regions of the United States. The first six books are for children (aged 9 - 12); to be followed by an adventure/mystery series for young adults (aged 13 -17).

First-inspired when impressed by the welcoming and kindness of so many people she encountered during her first international travels, even when traveling alone, where she did not speak the language. She wanted to provide stories with a kid's-eye view of other peoples, countries and cultures, especially for children who may not have the opportunity to travel.

One year into the pandemic, she started questioning whether children could lose their sense of wonder at an earlier age or suffer a decreased curiosity because of added social and emotional complexities magnified by the pandemic. Her inspiration became a soul-driven calling; she felt compelled to help safeguard those childhood treasures.

Vivianne believed she could best contribute through powerful storytelling saying, "Our brains are naturally wired to respond to storytelling."

She returned to writing and publishing; committed to publishing books children will want to read and share with their friends. Books of a caliber teachers, educators, and librarians would want their charges read; that parents and grandparents would want for their family.

Vivianne is a contributing co-author in Amazon Bestseller in three categories Life by Design: How to Create, Leverage, Legacy and Lifestyle;. Her chapter is named Empowered to Move Through Crises and Everyday Life. Also "WHEN Stories" 1st Edition - due to publish Q1 of 2025.
