INTRODUCTION

[3-4 paragraphs: (1) background and magnitude of the problem at global, national, and local levels with recent data; (2) previous studies and the research gap; (3) novelty; (4) objective. Use numbered Vancouver citations.]

Describe the background of the health problem here, citing the latest data [1,2]. Explain the magnitude of the problem at global, national, and local levels. The second paragraph reviews previous studies and the research gap that remains unanswered [3-5]. The final paragraph states the novelty and the objective of this study.

METHODS

[Describe in sufficient detail to allow replication.]

Study Design, Setting, and Time

State the study design (e.g., cross-sectional, cohort, quasi-experimental, qualitative phenomenological), setting, and study period.

Population, Sample, and Sampling Technique

Describe the population, inclusion and exclusion criteria, the sample size formula, and the sampling technique.

Instruments and Data Collection

Describe the instruments, including validity and reliability testing, and the data collection procedure.

Data Analysis

Describe univariate, bivariate, and multivariate analyses (or thematic analysis for qualitative research), the software used, and the significance level ($p<0.05$).

Research Ethics

This study received ethical approval from [name of ethics committee], number [No. xxx/xxx/xxxx], dated [dd-mm-yyyy]. All participants provided written informed consent.

RESULTS

Results are described in narrative form and supported by tables or figures. An example is shown in Table 1.

Table 1. Characteristics of respondents

Characteristic	n	%	Mean±SD
Age (years)	-	-	xx.x±x.x
Education
Basic-secondary	xx	xx.x
Higher	xx	xx.x

Source: Primary data, year

DISCUSSION

[Interpret findings, compare with previous studies, explain mechanisms, implications, and limitations.]

Discuss the main findings and relate them to theory and previous studies [6-9]. Explain similarities and differences and their possible reasons. Describe the implications for practice, education, and health policy.

Limitations

State the limitations of the study (e.g., design, sample size, bias) and suggestions for future research.

CONCLUSION

The conclusion answers the research objective concisely (one paragraph), does not repeat detailed results, and offers practical recommendations or directions for further research.
