Welcome back to Yang Daily! I'll be your host, Alex Chaney, bringin' you all the Yang news you need to live your life right. Hope everyone had a great Thanksgiving! Low-key affair for my family but it went well enough. I'm actually heading up for a weekend lunch with the parents tomorrow/today, so I better get this out and get to sleep. Let's hit it.

Shout-out to our Tier 3 Patrons, Shae Meehan and Nathan Stankowski, as well as all our other Patrons! You keep us all informed and engaged. If anyone out there wants to join these advocates of Humanity First and independent journalism, head over to Patreon.com/YangDaily. It would only take a couple bucks a month from each listener to keep this podcast and community going and growing! On to the news!

-Tired of hearing about inflation yet? Interested in the rest of the economy? There's plenty of news, even if a lot of the media is uninterested. For instance, the Bureau of Labor Statistics has reported that, over the last 4 months, it underestimated job growth by a cumulative 626k jobs. That's the largest discrepancy since 1979! That August report, of 235k, which media and politicians had a field day with? It was actually 483k; more than double. And economists generally expect this rapid growth to continue into 2022.

How does this under-reporting happen? Well, corrections are very common, because the jobs numbers rely on businesses reporting to the Bureau of Labor Statistics and only about half report on time. Reports that are received later are added after-the-fact. This makes the growth numbers an extrapolation process. There are also sometimes misunderstandings on questionnaires that lead employed people to report as unemployed, or vice versa. This happened in 2020, when the job losses were vastly under-reported. Recent inaccuracies have just been unusually high.

Goldman Sachs expects the unemployment rate to drop to a 50-year low next year – or 3.5%, from the current 4.6%. That's compared to 15% last year. And jobless claims have already beat them to it, currently at a 52-year low. Wages, are up as much as 11% in some industries, from last year. Consumer spending is up 16%. Mortgage rates are at 2.5%. GDP growth is over 20%, though it has slowed dramatically with the ending of stimulus.

Just as when we reviewed the larger economy months ago, all signs point to a booming recovery, and we have stimulus to thank for much of the surprisingly rapid pace. That's not to say there aren't massive, glaring holes that countless people are falling through. But that's just business as usual here in the land of the not-so-free. It sure would be great to see more credit being given to all the good that came of unconditional financial aid, though, instead of the media's morbid obsession with only inflation. It's almost like they have an incentive to focus on negative news, for views...

-I'm not going to pretend I understand the blockchain world well enough to vet this but it's coming from Scott. He says, quote: "If you're interested in an NFT project that hasn't minted yet and is built around the concept of providing all holders a monthly income paid in $SOL, then here's a link to the Solana Bank Box Discord to get in on the pre-sale happening in a couple days." End quote. Like I said, I'm not up on the times in this case but, if there are any listeners knowledgeable in such things, thought I'd pass along the opportunity.

-So, I didn't have much to say about the Rittenhouse trial before. Well... he just went on Tucker Carlson and the two of them reminisced about how they like Yang... Yeah. You can imagine the shit-storm that kicked up. Purists lose their minds when Andrew even visits on an un-approved channel, much less receives the favor of a vigilante killer. Unfortunately, and predictably, they filter the event through logical fallacies and a perspective of tribal cynicism, to reach the twisted conclusion that if Yang is liked by people who do bad things, that makes Yang a bad person. It's simple, easy, and stupid; all the ingredients for a viral take.

What the event actually represents is what YangGang have been saying since the presidential primary: Andrew knows how to appeal to many of the same people that Trump does, but with a message of love, instead of hate; empirical, humanitarian policy, instead of death, treason, and lies. These people need a better path and they need a better leader to show them.

It's easy, but counter-productive, to dismiss those you disagree with as inhuman, evil, and hopeless. It's hard, but productive, to treat them as humans like you, who have been misled by different circumstances. You can't kill or suppress hate or ignorance with more of the same. You have to treat it, patiently and compassionately.

To simply outcast those whose behavior and opinions you dislike is to reinforce an echo chamber that will strengthen the very perspectives you find deplorable, both in them and in you.

Those who shame others for attempting to reason with their "enemies" should know that's only making the problem worse.

The first step to changing someone's mind is to gain their respect. Many Republicans and Trump fans like Yang despite his policies and positions being largely opposite of Trump's. Those who oppose Trumpism should learn from Yang, rather than attacking him and repeating past mistakes.

I wish that Rittenhouse had more exposure to people like Yang. He could have taken a better path. We all could.

-And, finally, Forward Party has new volunteer opportunities. Looks like they need graphic designers, animators, and pamphlet designs. If you've got skills in the visual or language arts, now's your time to shine!

-And that'll do it for today's Yang Daily! Bookmark and share the Economics thread, Scott's NFT opportunity, the Rittenhouse thread, and the Forward volunteer work, Find out what you can do to ban gerrymandering and otherwise promote democracy in your state, at FairVote or RepresentUs, Flood congress with calls, tweets, faxes, and letters, using the easy volunteer contacts below, If you need help, Consult the Income Movement aid database, the Mission Asset Fund, or United Way. And, don't forget, to Yang Daily.
