Elevator Pitch:

He falls for a pink haired beauty at a coffee shop, then learns they're co-workers on a new project. Will their pasts pull them apart, or can they learn to battle their demons together?

Blurb:

James wants to give up on more than just L.A.

Alexis wants a way to take her life back.

Welcome to Los Angeles! Home of Hollywood magic, highrise buildings, and dream-like hopes of stardom and success. For the right people, it's one of the best places to build a career and a life. But for some, the price of fame is more than they can handle.

Following a tragic accident, life-long Los Angelean James Barton has lost his spark. Failure greets him at every corner, and the stack of bills looms as tall as the stack of rejection letters. With one trip to the coffee shop and his last few dollars, everything he knows is about to change.

With incredible friends, an amazing career, and a cute apartment in the heart of the Arts District, Alexis Strauss is living the California dream. She'll admit her dating life could use some work, but nobody is perfect. But LA has a way of bringing out the skeletons she'd hoped were locked away in her past. Behind her joyful facade, she's haunted by secrets that could upend everything she's worked for.

Let Me Love You Anyway is a first person, dual-POV adult contemporary romance meant for readers 18+, and is book one in the interconnected standalone Hollywoodland series.
