

Change the “very + adjective” phrases with a suitable word.

1. You have to be very careful when you travel abroad because gestures regarded as normal in your country can be considered rude.
2. The behaviour of a spoiled kid can become very bad if it is not addressed in the early years of their childhood.
3. Some people have very stupid ideas and think that feminism considers women superior to men rather than equal.
4. Your composition doesn't have a lot of mistakes but the vocabulary and grammar structures are very simple
5. Teenagers are often very surprised at the fact that not many years ago, you had to pay for every single text message you sent.
6. Nowadays, travelling is regarded as something to show off. Many people embark on very dangerous trips to countries with conflicts just to say “I've been to a unique place”.
7. Up is a very good movie because it can be read at different levels: kids will focus on the very funny adventure the protagonists live, but adults won't be able to forget the touching manner in which something as very serious as a miscarriage is tackled.
8. Right and left wing parties have very different approaches to how to deal with political corruption.
9. The impact plastic waste is having on seas and forests is very big
10. Learning how to cope with negative emotions during your adolescence is very necessary to have a mentally stable life as an adult.
11. The meeting was very short and everybody went home after it.
12. Beethoven had a very special talent: he kept on composing music even after going deaf.
13. It seems that having a very expensive smartphone has become a basic need for a lot of people.

14. A change in the way we move around in big cities is very important if we want to decrease pollution.
15. For me, historical films are very boring
16. I found her speech on human rights very interesting
17. Instagram models look very beautiful on their Instagram posts, but is this real or only something they make us believe and desire?
18. Scientists are very sure there is life somewhere else in the universe.