Out of the 25 quantifiable commitments of the 120-Day Social Contract, 17 have been completed, 2 are ongoing, 1 is partially achieved, and 5 are yet to be fulfilled. BudgetIT Ghana's scores show high performance in governance, education, social policy, and justice, where almost all the promises were achieved within the timeframe. However, there remain significant weaknesses in economic restructuring, trade reforms and institutional accountability, where significant promises like customs reform, the establishment of the AEDC, and SOE shake-ups have seen no actual action. Although the 100% completion rate on the majority of social promises is to be commended, these were largely policy announcements and fiscal commitments, rather than ongoing structural changes. The 72%

figure captures both the large number of actions taken and the chances lost to drive through base reforms in priority domains such as anti-corruption, environment, and economic competitiveness.
