

Episode 14 Show Notes

Adan Jacobs- Exploring Judaism, Science and Philosophy

Adam Jacobs is a New York-born musician, ordained rabbi, writer, and philosopher with a deep passion for exploring the intersection of science, spirituality, and consciousness. Holding a B.A. in music from Brandeis University and a master's in jazz performance from the New England Conservatory, Adam initially pursued a career as a musician before his journey took a spiritual turn, leading him to rabbinic ordination in Jerusalem. For over 25 years, he has sought to blend his diverse interests, drawing connections between music, theology, and the search for meaning.

As the Managing Director of the Aish Center in Manhattan, Adam is dedicated to introducing the beauty and joy of Judaism to people from all walks of life. His writings have appeared in notable publications such as The Huffington Post, The Times of Israel, and Aish.com, where he often explores uplifting and thought-provoking aspects of Jewish tradition. Adam is also a featured teacher in the documentary Kabbalah Me and the author of The Forgotten Light, a collection of essays on spirituality and philosophy.

Adam hosts two podcasts, Feed Your Head, where he delves into the intersection of science and theology, and The Secret Chord, exploring the spiritual depths of music. He currently resides in New Jersey with his wife, Penina, and their five children.

Website: <https://aish.com/>