Logline:

Scientists pick up that a cataclysmic asteroid is on a collision course with Earth and will strike it within ten years.

The story can explore themes of impending, foreseen danger, showing ways that people can both come together, but also how cooperation can break down.

It can also dive into relationships and how they would shift with the universal knowledge that they most likely won't last beyond the doomsday point.

Showing the dark sides of humanity, from the groups that fight against progress, or those who use this as an opportunity to further their own gains.

That hope cannot come from an idealized concept of everyone coming together, but rather from a select few deciding to fight against incredible odds.
