

IMPORTANT STATEMENT REGARDING FFF DIGITAL:

After four years of the existence of Fridays For Future Digital (FFF Digital) since its inception in 2019, our founder has made the difficult decision to leave and close the organization. We are sharing this statement to provide clarity about FFF Digital.

What started as an accessible alternative for our founders to participate in the Fridays For Future movement grew into a powerful global platform for empowering youth climate leaders. FFF Digital became a force for addressing lesser-known climate justice issues, providing people with purpose and a sense of belonging during challenging times. We cherish the impact of campaigns like #DefendTheDefenders and #EscazuYa, which contributed to the Escazu agreement.

Through the years we have gained valuable insights and wisdom. This organization has been an essential stepping stone for many current youth climate leaders, inspiring them to create positive change. We are incredibly grateful to the hundreds of activists worldwide who have contributed their hard work and dedication to our global family. Thank you for making a difference with us.

FFF Digital represented the future of the climate movement. Emphasizing inclusivity, accessibility, diversity, and justice, we fostered a non-toxic, drama-free community focused on global climate justice and frontline communities. Our founder firmly believed in our new direction and its potential to make an impact in various aspects of the global climate justice movement.

However, many of our best leaders have moved on to pursue other ventures, and our organization should as well. The most fulfilled activists know when to step back when their efforts aren't reciprocated, and when it's time to avoid burnout by redirecting their energies elsewhere.

We no longer wish to beg people to dedicate time to a grand vision of a dead organization and choose to prioritize our own well-being. Organizations may have their time, but movements endure. FFF Digital has served its purpose, and now we can utilize its successes and failures to contribute to other parts of the movement. We persevere and move forward. We hope you will carry on our legacy and appreciate the contributions we made to the movement.
