This story began when I closed my eyes...

There was a girl who knew that that she mustn't swim at night because her parents had told her thousands of times that the sea could be a really dangerous place, but she thought that as she had done many times before there was no danger if she just wet her feet. That way she went into the sea. She had just started to swim when suddenly she realized that it was so difficult for her to move, she tried to swim but the sea was stronger than her and attract her inside it. She started to think that she should have obeyed her parents and just when she started to feel terrified and in panic she saw that there were two wolves coming to save her.

Once she was saved she realized that it was not the sea, it was just a little puddle and... in that precisely moment I woke up.
