And in the shadows putt them

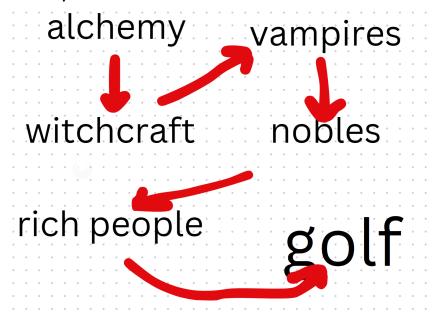

I started by incorporating the theme shadow first because the alchemy theme is hard. immediately i thought of a board game i had played where you would turn of all the lights and it was like hide and seek but with a tiny lantern, also it was a board game. So then i made a shadow engine that made shadows. Then i made a little circle (the main character) then i made an arrow that pointed towards the mouse pointer to control where the character went and that is when it thought of

I was so utterly inspired by this that i decided to add a bar that goes up and down like all kirby games have

That was when i realize how i could incorporate the theme of alchemy

Plot: You are the dark baron Ruarson's royal alchemist.

Raurson is the evil ruler of dormor and sits atop his dark tower of darad bur and he pays you minimum wage so you can't afford to cross the moist mountains and then go all the way to the squire were all the good golf courses are so you decide to sneak onto one of the golf courses at night but you must be very careful not to be caught

I decided that the player would have to stay in the shadows or they would take damage. But you cant make good puzzles with just that so then i thought that the golf course might have a night guard so i made one and if he sees you you lose the level but then i couldn't think of another game mechanic so i tought of golf and that made me think of rich people and that made me think of capitalism and that made me think of america and that made me think of guns so i decided to make a gaurd with a gun that shoots at you and once i finished that i had 6 levels but i decided that 6 is a very boring amount of levels so i decided that i would add one more level and it would have a bunch of heavily armed guards and it would be really hard but then i made it and it was too hard so i made it less hard then i made a win screen and then i was done so
