(1 blank line, 11pt)

A. INTRODUCTION (uppercase, 12pt, bold)

Contains a description of the analysis of the objective situation or condition of the research subject, the research issues and focus, the reasons for choosing the research topic, and the expected social changes or research objectives supported by qualitative and quantitative data, as well as a relevant literature review. (Times New Roman, size 12, Spacing: before 0 pt; after 0 pt, Line spacing: 1)

B. METHOD (uppercase, 12pt, bold)

This section consists of research design, subjects/objects/population/sample, operational definitions and measurement of variables, data collection techniques and instruments, and data analysis techniques.

C. RESULTS AND DISCUSSION (uppercase, 12pt, bold)

This section contains the characteristics of the subject/object/sample/respondent data, the results of data analysis, instruments, and hypothesis testing results (if any), answers to research questions, findings, and interpretations. This section can be graphed, if possible, for each research variable. Next, descriptive statistical values (e.g., Mean, SD, Maximum, Minimum) are presented along with their interpretations. The final section displays the results of the hypothetical research and a complete discussion. In the discussion section, the manuscript should compare the research results with previous research. Research implications and future directions are permitted.

D. CONCLUSION (uppercase, 12pt, bold)

This section provides a brief conclusion about the research discussed in this article along with (optional) suggestions for further development or continuation of the research.
