PROFESSIONAL BIO | ERICA COURDAE & INDIA JACKSON

As an athlete, photographer, and creative consultant to personal brands, India Jackson spent the first decade of her career witnessing talented professionals being forced to adopt identities that were sellable but not authentic. Watching the market flooded with an intense focus on follower count and crafted personas, she committed to taking a more aligned approach to influence-building.

Erica Courdae Coté is committed to shifting focus, power, and resources to support individual healing to foster a thriving community collective. Erica believes imperfect action is necessary as a pivotal part of evolution and growth. She takes action through being an author coach, mentor, speaker, and 25+ year beauty industry veteran.

In 2018, Erica and India co-founded Pause on the Play: a resource library, podcast, and consultancy committed to guiding individuals in the process of defining their values, diversifying their networks, and disrupting systems of oppression.

Combined they have provided training and consulting services to renowned businesses ranging from Christian Dior and Paul Mitchell School to Martha Beck Incorporated and Blue Cross Blue Shield. Their voices have been featured on podcasts, workshops, and online communities, collectively reaching over one hundred thousand people.

PROFESSIONAL BIO | INDIA JACKSON

As an athlete, photographer, and creative consultant to personal brands, India Jackson spent the first decade of her career watching as talented professionals were forced to adopt identities that were sellable but not authentic.

Watching the market flooded with an intense focus on follower count and crafted personas, she committed to taking a more aligned approach to influence-building. Her brand visibility firm, Flaunt Your Fire, now proudly helps entrepreneurs and their teams align their public image with their most deeply held beliefs.

In 2018, India co-founded Pause on the Play: a resource library, podcast, and consultancy committed to guiding individuals in the process of defining their values, diversifying their networks, and disrupting systems of oppression.

Her advice has been featured on over 100 podcast episodes and applied in businesses ranging from Christian Dior to Martha Beck Incorporated. To learn more about India's work, check out the Flaunt Your Fire Podcast wherever you get your audio.

SAMPLE QUESTIONS | ERICA COURDAE

- 1. You often talk about the importance of being an 'imperfect ally®.' What does that mean, and how do you model being an imperfect ally® for the LGBTQIA+ community?
- 2. What inspired you to leave your job as a stylist to open your own business?
- 3. Online businesses are often saying their spaces are "safe". How can you know if you've created a safe and inclusive environment for your contractors or employees?
- 4. You say that leaders can't JUST operationalize Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion. What do you mean by that?
- 5. People often talk about imposter syndrome. As a member of the BIPOC community, you have a different perspective on it. Could you share what that is?

SAMPLE QUESTIONS | INDIA JACKSON

- 6. "Brand" is a word that gets thrown around a lot. How do you define it and why?
- 7. You say that everyone has a brand, whether or not you're selling something. Why is it - important to shape your public image if you don't own your own business?

- 8. I know that a big part of your story stems from your experience as a model and photographer. How does this inform your approach to visibility, especially for those of us that aren't as comfortable putting ourselves out there?
- 9. Influencer culture has conditioned us to believe that the number of followers someone has is an indicator of their quality. How important is it to focus on follower count?
- 10. Many of us who want to grow our following look to others for clues on what steps we should be taking. I know you don't believe once-size-fits-most approaches work. What do you recommend for those of us who are stuck on how to attract new audiences or opportunities?

NOTE: Choosing to be a podcast guest for someone does not signify an endorsement for anyone involved. Being a part of an interview does not signal that Erica condones their personal or professional practices, approves of their business, or is in total support of all of their actions. Her presence also does not provide validation that they are actively engaged in DEI efforts or have worked with her in any capacity.

However, it does mean that Erica is prioritizing the creation of awareness and conversation, even when the opinions are not in full alignment. This action prompts others to {Re} consider their Normal and to hold space for contrasting realities, journeys, and perspectives.

NOTE: Choosing to be interviewed by or a podcast guest for someone does not signify an endorsement for any party involved.

Being a part of an interview does not signal that India condones someone's personal or professional practices, approves of their business, or is in total support of all of their actions. Her presence also does not provide validation that they are actively engaged in Values-Based brand visibility practices, Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Efforts, or have worked with her in any capacity.

However, it does mean that India is prioritizing the disruption of expectations and owning her values explicitly, even when the opinions are not in full alignment. This action models for others what is possible when they own their own values and their power as they amplify their influence within the world.
