

Meta's new AI thinks Mark Zuckerberg is creepy and manipulative

"Zuckerberg is creepy and manipulative," declares Meta's new AI Chatbot. New AI, BlenderBot 3, has a lot of things to say about Zuckerberg which has the collective memory of the internet and its founders. When asked a question, the AI always replied with respect for his business savviness and philanthropy. However, when asked the same question as about Zuckerberg, the chatbot replied, "I don't like him at all."

Why The Sale Of Smartphones Is Falling?

Demand for smartphones is falling but not for costly phones. As per reports, it is believed that people are holding on to their phones more which has led to the fall in the demand for the smartphone. Still, the demand for costly smartphones is rising. Companies like Vivo, Xiaomi, and Oppo saw a downward trend while companies like Apple and Samsung saw an upward trend. Even with the rise in cost, it has not affected the demand for the latter.

Officials have warned Tesla for Hitting the Car with Child Dummies

Tesla is urging officials to take down a viral tape of a Tesla car hitting a child-size dummy. Tesla insists that the tape is slanderous and deceptive. Some people raised their voices to ban the Beta version of Tesla's Full Self-Driving, including billionaire Dan O'Dowd. Although officials have warned parents not to let their kids sit in the driver's seat nevertheless, people still let their kids sit in the driver's seat under their watch full eye.

Why Huawei Can't Capture The Market?

Huawei saw a 52% dip due to low demand in their first quarter half report. Reasons being due to high inflation, the decline in customers, and the imposing restriction by the USA. China-based Huawei funded a few new businesses and technology which has somehow impacted the profit. Huawei plans to expand its business into other sectors like smart car components, and energy efficiency networks, with their cloud system business which takes over China's 18% of the market.

Blood On Streets: Google Warns Its Employees What'll Happen If They Don't Get Results

Google plans to lay off employees if the company didn't perform well as it should because of a lack of productivity. The company will have a "comprehensive inspection of sales productivity" and that if next quarter outcomes doesn't do better, "there will be blood on the streets,". Google is not alone in this, Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg too had warned his employees of lack of productivity. Earlier Twitter CEO Parag Agrawal too notified the hiring freeze.
