- U.S. Department of Education---Every year the U.S. Department of Education evaluates how well each state is meeting its obligations to students with disabilities under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. The U.S. Department of Education is seeking feedback and ideas about how to prioritize equity in its approach to assessing state performance.

Feedback from the public on the issue is being accepted through Sept. 30.

“The Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) monitors states’ compliance with the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) to ensure that states provide early intervention services for infants and toddlers with disabilities and the free appropriate public education (FAPE) of children with disabilities. To accomplish this task, OSEP has developed the Results Driven Accountability (RDA) system. Using this framework, OSEP examines both the educational results and outcomes for children with disabilities in each State as well as how a State is meeting the compliance requirements of IDEA.

Each year, OSEP reviews the State Performance Plan/Annual Performance Report (SPP/APR), information obtained through monitoring visits, and any other publicly available information to determine how well each State meets the requirements of the IDEA. States are assigned one of the following categories:

- Meets requirements and purposes of the IDEA;
- Needs assistance in implementing the requirements of Part B or Part C of the IDEA;
- Needs intervention in implementing the requirements of Part B or Part C of the IDEA; or
- Needs substantial intervention in implementing the requirements of Part B or Part C of the IDEA.”
