Neuropathy is a disease that affects millions of people in the US alone. It's a disease with no known cure, but despite its effects and prognosis, people are living with neuropathy and they're not letting the disease keep them indoors, on their couches, wrapped in a Snuggie and wishing they could go out dancing with their friends.

The Truth about Peripheral Neuropathy

Peripheral neuropathy is a disease that affects the nerves of the peripheral nervous system. The disease attacks the nerves causing irreparable nerve damage. This nerve damage can cause neuropathy in feet, which can create other symptoms, such as: tingling feet, and numb feet. These symptoms are dangerous because this condition can lead to restricted blood flow in the feet, which can lead to nerve death and even amputation.

Diabetic neuropathy is very similar to peripheral neuropathy except that it is caused by diabetes. Neuropathy isn't just tingling and numbness in the feet, neuropathy in feet is a painful condition that can leave you chair bound and unable to complete the simplest tasks while standing.

Neuropathy Treatment for Neuropathy in Feet

Neuropathy doesn't have to leave you in pain and dissatisfied with life. Taking control of your condition can be difficult, but it is worth it. Neuropathy treatments include: nerve support formula, neuropathy cream, and other forms of pain relief through prescription pain medications.

Neuropathy creams are specially formulated for use topically in areas affected by neuropathy. These creams usually include capsaicin, which is a medicine derived from hot peppers. Capsaicin is what makes hot peppers hot, and it is now utilized for pain relief from neuropathy in feet. Vitamins B12, B1 and Alpha Lipoic Acid have also been shown to produce wonderful results.

While the nerve damage from neuropathy can cause neuropathy in feet, it can also cause other conditions, such as: constipation, incontinence, sexual dysfunction, and abnormal heart rate and blood pressure. These conditions can lead to serious problems living a normal life, but the pain associated with neuropathy in feet can be controlled with the right attitude, and the right medications.
