Veteran Justice Outreach Social Worker

Lily Thomas has worked in Veterans Justice Outreach at Coatesville VA Medical Center (VAMC) since 2015 where she supports justice involved Veterans by connecting them with treatment services, advocating within legal systems, and promoting recovery and stability.

Her career at Coatesville VAMC started in 2010 when Lily took a position as a Suicide Prevention Coordinator, where she led initiatives focused on Veterans safety, crisis intervention, and community collaboration.

Lily Thomas began her career as a licensed clinical social worker with Delaware Count Children and Youth Services, where she developed a strong foundation in child welfare and family support. After several years, she transitioned to Chester County Children, Youth and Families, serving first as a caseworker and later expanded her clinical expertise in supporting children and families through complex challenges by taking the role as a therapist.

Lily earned her bachelor's degree in social work from West Chester University and her Master's Degree in Social Work from Bryn Mawr College Graduate School of Social Work & Social Research. She is a Licensed clinic Social Worker.
