

SL: QUIT YouTube NOW! (Or do this)

You probably didn't expect such an email from me...

But there are a few reasons why you should quit uploading NOW if you are making one of these mistakes:

1. Avoid comparing your channel to larger ones.

One of the easiest ways to get distracted and discouraged is to compare your success with someone who has already made it.

You don't expect to become Arnold Schwarzenegger after a single trip to the gym. Do you?

2. Being Inconsistent.

Ultimately, YouTube operates like a relentless machine; if you don't consistently upload content, your place will be claimed by a more consistent creator.

3. Your sole purpose is making money.

Many of you may have launched your YouTube channel with the aim of just generating money, rather than focusing on creating engaging and entertaining content for your viewers.

There was once a quote I heard,

“Pursue excellence, and success shall become your companion.”

This means you should focus on making the best videos possible on the platform and views will fall right into your hands.

4. Improve with each video.

Consistent uploads are crucial, but in the ever-evolving landscape of YouTube, if you don't continually improve your content with each new video then you will be overshadowed by someone who does, even if it is a slight improvement in your editing or making better thumbnails. It's like a race where even if you're running, you won't win unless you also improve your running technique—just ask Usain Bolt, who kept breaking his own records to stay at the top of the sprinting world.

If you're eager to expand your knowledge and boost your channel's performance, we have a valuable resource waiting for you.

Join our FREE webinar this upcoming Sunday at 7:00 pm EST, where we're sharing everything we know about growing your channel. It's 60 minutes of pure, actionable insights to help you conquer YouTube.

But remember, success requires effort. Join +- Lazy people need not apply. If you're ready to give it your all, click here to secure your spot: [\[Insert Link\]](#)

See you on the other side.