

Again we are back from our little adventurer Casper, that the second time he returned to that place, it was a great and beautiful experience to which he told his owners about them, in addition to bringing them reminders that it was the food that they loved trying them , about dawn casper got up from usual stretching eh going downstairs where his owners were possibly awake and he was right and several of these were awake yawning even with some sleep and some in the kitchen, greeting them with hugs and pampering, it was wet outside since yesterday it rained all afternoon until nightfall, I still did thanks to the rain many of the plants grew better and stronger

In that one of the little ones returned inside the house and excitedly tells Casper to look at the garden, he looks and gets excited and is surprised, the tree that he had planted as a gift from his little friends had grown completely! It was super big and beautiful! he stood out in the whole garden looking beautiful, the little ones were also excited and the owners too

Casper was completely happy seeing the tree nearby and wanted to show it to his friends from the hidden garden, but of course, I don't think they like to meet their owners because they are shy, his owner without the need for words understood Casper and entered the house and minutes after searching among all the things he returned with a camera, he was encouraging everything and those who came to wake up to take a family photo

I did everything quickly, they stood near the tree and put the camera on timer to make way for the owner to put himself in the photo and everyone saying "Steam!!" towards the photo is taken and a beautiful photograph of everyone in the tree comes out, towards the owner took the photo towards the others approaching and seeing the photo, and the owner said that they go inside for breakfast, they all went inside for breakfast today what were waffles

after a while they had all finished breakfast Casper was looking at the photo, he was excited to show the photo to his friends in the hidden garden but he also wanted to keep the photo as it was very pretty, his owner even approached him caressing him, he knew that this It would happen that by surprise he shows him a replica of the photo, while everyone was having breakfast, he left the photo to be replicated in one of his events, this excited Casper that he could now have both the photo and give the photo to his friends from garden his happy owner caressed him one more time and told him not to forget to take the backpack with the survival things in case something happens, letting it be understood that casper can go out to see his friends without further delay he went to get his backpack and you were asking near the camera, he really wanted to take a picture so they could also see near his friends and not just drawings, and the owner doubtless gave it to him but told him to take good care of it Casper attended and with a military pose promised himself before the responsibility of taking care of the camera

He did everything ready, he said goodbye to his owners and at a fast and excited pace he went to the hidden garden, he was excited to see them again, he was careful when he got to the spa lake, not to wet the backpack that had both the photo and the camera, and again he used his ofalto to reach the village

Towards the other little foxes they greeted him, they remembered him for the great help of the great banquet that made him win the price and popularity of the town, and that's why because of the emotions his 5 little friends realized that Casper returned and yes, they all went him in a group hug

They all happily talked to each other about the things that happened but above all the little ones wanted to show Casper something, which he was excited to go see, they arrived at the part of the farm in the village that to his surprise there were a lot of pumpkins! using the only pumpkin seeds they planted a lot of these having pumpkins, these being just as big as these but they still liked the taste of these

Casper was amazed at these and more how well cared for these pumpkins were, they seemed to shine, the little foxes looking happy at Casper's reaction, this made Casper remember that he also had something for them and he took the happy photo out of his backpack and he I show them the little foxes were surprised by the tree that grew in casper's garden but their excitement was quickly replaced by confusion for the people in the photo apart from casper, casper happily began to talk about his family and how good they were, what the little ones they were unruly and affectionate and the big ones were like parents to them, at first this worried the little foxes but then they became curious when listening to the story of casper next to these

Towards this they took a pumpkin, it was ready to eat with the help of Casper, and they went to his home, they chatted for a long time, they ate the pumpkin, cooked it in various dishes and spent time together, to do this they planned to go to another lake where they can swim more and do more activities, but a smell attracted Casper

It was a smell he had never smelled before, it was rare and mysterious and as an instinct he began little by little to follow the smell, the little foxes quickly realized that Casper was going somewhere else and confused they began to follow him

they came to a small lake where a light emitted in the center, both casper and the little foxes were confused, they didn't know if it was something good or something bad but casper made him curious so he carefully approached the water, touched it to see if there was a reaction, being none, he did that little by little he put his hands in the water

The little ones looked worried at this, wishing from deep inside that nothing bad would happen and so Casper put his hands looking for whatever it was that illuminated until he felt something and carefully began to take it out, when he took it out it was....a large blue pearl? everyone was surprised at this relic but casper noticed something when he had it

I could see a kind of shadow inside it, as if there was something inside? He put his ear close to the happy pearl and listened carefully, and could hear a small heartbeat, this surprised Casper, which he told his little fox friends that it was not a pearl, it was an egg, they were all excited, especially curious about what was inside, I made Casper carefully start to take care of him

Due to this unforeseen event, they all returned to the house looking at the egg, doubting what it needed for the creature to come out of the egg. Casper had a simple assumption and without further ado asked for a container. One of these returned with a wooden box to which Casper went. goes with this and returns with this full of water and carefully lays the egg

he thought that if he was in the water, he would surely need the water, which his friends agreed, they were still doubting that he needed an egg more, so they went with an animal expert to see what they could do

When they went and he carefully observed the manrino egg, he told them that he only needed water and nothing else, even when he made the eggs, they normally take time to open and, not knowing this egg, he does not know what state the egg is in to hatch.

Towards the group of friends on the way to go home they were somewhat relieved but not so much casper, if they took days to open that would mean that perhaps he would never see it hatch since he could not spend days outside his home, luckily the egg He started to move, alarming Casper once and also the little ones at Casper's reaction.

the egg continues to move and grow, it was hatching! it was his lucky day, everyone was excitedly watching in the middle of town and finally something came out of the egg, it was cute, it was small, pink, with several antennae, casper looked amazed at the birth of this creature

while one of them detected the newborn creature "A Sharkawoodles!" he said excitedly while the others looked confused, he explained that while the animal specialist fox looked at the egg, curious he saw the books of the place near aquatic animals and one of these was this

He did everything and they got more excited and Casper thought that this was a good remembrance moment to take a photo, he took out the camera from his backpack and said about taking a photo, his friends did not know about the photos but to Casper he explained what it was Same as I gave him the photo of the tree so you are excited, getting together and showing the little newborn creature, and he took the photo, coming out beautiful

They all returned to where the specialist who excitedly said that he could finally investigate about this specimen and thanks them for having found the egg

It was already getting dark and unfortunately Casper had to leave and in a hug he said goodbye to his friends, when he arrived home he showed the photo to his owners who were surprised and delighted with their new friends and the creature that Casper had in his hands in the photo, this being a nice day
