

Creating Your Recorded Slideshow with Screencastify

This is a process for recording yourself as you talk through your Google Slides presentation. You can use a Chromebook to do the recording.

Click here to see an example of how these might look when you're done. This is not a student example, but it was created to show the process to teachers.

These are the general steps for creating these videos:

- Step 1: Build your slideshow in Google Slides. Follow all directions your teacher gives you for that part of the assignment and have him or her check it over to be sure you included everything you need to.
- Step 2: Practice what everyone will say as they present.
- Step 3: Use Screencastify to record it*.
- Step 4: Turn in your finished video (which should be in your Google Drive through Google Classroom.

*The first time you run Screencastify you will need to follow the prompts to set it up. If you're not using a Chromebook, you might have to install it too.

This video tutorial shows you what you need to do in step 3. Be sure to watch it before you try to record. Remember that you won't have to install Screencastify on Chromebooks because it will automatically install for you when you log on one.
