What Makes A Photo Booth A Great Branding Tool Whatsoever be the type of party you are planning for, photo booth rental in San Francisco is one of the key sources of entertainment that you are supposed to have. Whether it is a private party, a corporate party, a banging music festival, contemporary photo booths are packed with an array of marketing features that can be a wonderful means to promote your business or remind guests about the enjoyment they had at your event. The following are some of the things that make a photo booth a great branding tool: Messaging and logos enhance brand awareness Starting with the print layout as a mobile advertisement for a company can be a wonderful tool for messaging. Think about it, the pictures from the event will be displayed on desks and refrigerator doors with several daily views. So these prints are an exceptional means to keep your branding and messaging in view long after the event is over. The amount of space people have for such memories is narrow, so creating the best quality pictures is the key to win the best place. Creating an exceptional experience helps to maximize branding Although traditional photo booths are amazing, however, imagine the impact a photo booth will have if you get innovative with a more dynamic service. You can get a photo booth rental in San Francisco that will help you narrate the story of your company via slow motion, 360 video, or a flipbook feature. You can have a word with the service provider to explore features that fit with your brand and event. If you would like to remind the guests about your brand, make sure to customize the photo booth with colors, backdrops, and design layout that compliment your event and brand. Custom backdrops and sets can even act as a prime advertisement space for sponsors or other stakeholders who would gain from having their logos displayed at the event. Broadcast the experience with social media to enhance digital presence Today, the most influential marketing and branding tool is social media. Guests get to take pleasure in posting their moments right away while it takes your brand viral on Twitter, Instagram, Facebook and the capability of posting to other social media platforms. Not just will adding social media integration to the photo booth generate great buzz but it'll offer data insights and event data capture for effective marketing campaigns as well. It is a win-win situation when the guests get to share their memories with ease and you get compliant and reliable guest data. ROI is increased Your ROI has to be increased if you are going to invest in some sort of a marketing tool, and when it comes to a photo booth rental in San Francisco, your ROI is definitely going to be increased. Having the right photo booth at the corporate event is sure to create a great buzz around the brand. Based on the event, the ROI can be tremendous, and with the right marketing goals in mind, the effects can be seen a long time after the event.

Where to place your photo booth at the wedding reception is a very important part of the planning process. Some people suggest putting the photo booth front and center and then fitting in everything else however it will fit. I do not recommend that you do that, here are four great tips to get the best experience with your photo booth rental: 1. If The Guests Can't See It, The Guests Can't Use It. If the everything at the reception is in the same room, IE the guests, the dancing, the bar and the restrooms, then it is a good idea to put the photo booth in the same room too. Even if it is a smaller room or the room is full, it sometimes is OK to have the photo booth in an connected room next door, or just outside in the hallway. Think about it: if your guests can't see how much fun people are having with the photo booth, they're less likely to grab a prop and strike a pose and have their picture taken. 2. Give It Space Often times photo booth will be one of the main attractions at your event, so don't squeeze it in a tight space. The space needed for the photo booth is just under 8ft. wide by 6 ft deep, and we recommend having some extra room for the attendant and for guests to watch the fun. Your guests should feel comfortable while they wait to have their turn and not be crammed in like sardines in line at a cheap buffet. 3. The Photo Booth Loves Music While the photo booth doesn't dance itself, it does love to watch people dance, so while it seems like a good idea to put it near the dance floor (or as close as possible). It really is best to have it opposite the dance floor on another wall from the DJ or live music. Often times most receptions will have three popular places for guests to hang out: the photo booth, the dance floor and the bar. Keeping them near each other helps keep the party going and doesn't split the guests between things. 4. Go With The Flow Every wedding reception has a flow to it. We recommend taking some time to work out how the photo booth fits into your dream for the whole evening. Do you want it to be the highlight of the cocktail hour? Or have guests wait to use it right after they are done eating dinner and then have them slowly move to the dance floor in the later in the evening night? Will the photo booth be the primary activity for the reception? Are you going to make people walk great distances to use the photo booth, they may, but we recommend trying to avoid that. The key thing to remember is that a photo both isn't just an afterthought added onto an event. To get the most out of your photo booth rental, think about when it will be open, where it will be placed, and how your guests will be using it. The reality is that every wedding celebration is unique and the tips we give you may not apply to your particular special event. We love talking about photo booths and we're happy to give you our photo booth knowledge. With the advent of low-cost DSLR cameras, photobooths exploded in popularity during the late 2000's. For a while, many people thought that photobooths were a fad and wouldn't stay popular, especially for once in a lifetime events like weddings. However, as technology has improved, the things that companies are doing with photo booths are very cool and popular. Especially with the popularity of social media apps like Instagram and Snapchat. Current photo booths can now include filters and digital props & masks like the popular social media programs. For couples planning a wedding reception, a must have vendor is the wedding photographer. And while picture booths started becoming popular just over 10 years ago at weddings, they are even more popular now. With wedding planning websites like TheKnot reporting that 75% of couples have a photobooth of some kind at their wedding. Wedding photo booth experiences are evolving along with the technology. No longer is a plain DSLR camera connected to a laptop & printer considered a must-have photostation. In today's wedding marketplace, couples want to have a more interactive photo booth experience at their wedding reception. If you are planning a wedding reception in Minnesota, either in Minneapolis/St. Paul Twin Cities area or up the north shore near Duluth, then request a quote from Photo Active Events. Things to consider when booking a photobooth vendor for your wedding: Not only should a wedding photobooth provide printed photo strips for each of the guests, but as the client, you should get a digital copy of every photo taken in the photo booth. Some photo booth clients provide additional features and options, such as having a live slideshow from the photo booth, or creating a unique digital photo mosaic after the event. Your wedding photo booth should not only have a personalized print template with your names and wedding date, but it should be customized to match the colors and theme for your event. Top photostation rental companies have graphic designers who can create beautiful photo booth print templates for you. Your photo booth template can be any of the following: If you are looking for fun and unique options for your wedding photo booth for your guests to use at your reception.
