

I'm Mr. Beat, I'm standing on the exact spot.

I'm here in Dealey Plaza in Dallas, Texas, at the very spot where history was forever changed. It was here on November 22, 1963, that President John F. Kennedy and his motorcade were making their way through when shots rang out.

If you own a home, you may not even realize that your home's title and mortgage information are stored and available online. Unfortunately, thieves use this information to transfer you off your home's title to take out massive loans using your home's equity.

One poor lady in Atlanta came home to find a bulldozer tearing down her house. As it turns out, a thief had taken her off her home title and ordered the house to be torn down without her even knowing it!

The good news is, there are my friends over at Home Title Lock to prevent this crap from ever happening to you. Home Title Lock monitors your title 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and alerts you if any changes are made to your title. Most importantly, if fraud does happen, their team of restoration experts work to ensure your title is returned to its rightful owner.

I'm Mr. Beat, I'm standing on the exact spot of where the 35th president of the United States got shot. He took a bullet to the head. This is indisputable.

By the way, I was going to film ON the actual spot where it happened, but uh...yeah that would have been way too dangerous.

The assassination of John F. Kennedy remains one of the most tragic and shocking events in American history, but often it's remembered for its mystery, for there is still...60 years later...much we don't know about it.

Here is what we know....well...kind of...

On the morning of November 22, 1963, President Kennedy, also often known by his initials, "JFK," spoke at a breakfast in Fort Worth, Texas. After a very short flight aboard an official aircraft of the president, known simply as Air Force One, he and his wife, Jacqueline, joined Texas governor John Connally and his wife, Nellie, on a presidential motorcade that was to go through downtown Dallas before arriving at the Trade Mart to give another speech. In other cars in the motorcade? A bunch of people there literally to protect the president....mostly members of the Secret Service, but also members of local police forces.

The motorcade began at Love Field and made its way downtown, progressing down Main Street. Folks lined the street cheering the president on. The motorcade even stopped a couple times so that President Kennedy could shake hands with fans.¹ At approximately 12:29 Central Standard Time, the motorcade turned right onto Houston Street, heading west and entering Dealey Plaza. The motorcade then made a sharp left turn here on to Elm Street. Up there on the sixth floor of THAT building, the Texas School Book Depository, waiting for the president with a 6 and a half mm Carcano rifle, was Lee Harvey Oswald.

Soon after the president's car turned south onto Elm Street, Lee Harvey Oswald shot Kennedy. One bullet entered the president's back and exited through his throat. Another entered his head. Jacqueline, right next to him, screamed and climbed onto the rear of the limo. She was not struck by a bullet, but Governor Connally was. A bullet entered his upper back and his thigh. Most believe one bullet actually did much of the damage to both Connally and JFK. But more on that later. The limousine then rushed them to Parkland Hospital for emergency treatment. Connally survived, but it was there that doctors pronounced Kennedy dead about 30 minutes later. He was just 46 years old.

Meanwhile, as early as three minutes after the president was shot, police sealed off the Texas School Book Depository, so that no one could get in nor out. But by that time, Lee Harvey Oswald had quickly left the building, walking seven blocks before boarding a bus. After the bus got stuck in traffic, he got off and got a taxi. He had the taxi driver stop several blocks past his rooming house at 1026 North Beckley Ave, which is behind me right now. Believe it or not, it's a museum now. Oh we checked it out all right. Anyway, he then walked back here to grab his jacket and gun, spending no more than four minutes here. Dang this room is tiny. 6 feet by 15 feet. That's it.

At around 1:15, Oswald came across Dallas police officer J.D. Tippit near THIS intersection, 10th and Patton. By this time, Tippit had got a radio order to drive to this area to look for the man witnesses described as shooting President Kennedy. It was here that Tippit saw Oswald and he looked at him and was kind of like...this kind of looks like that dude they described on the radio. According to SEVERAL witnesses, Oswald walked over to Tippit's car and had a conversation with him. And then, after Tippit got out of the car, Oswald took out his handgun and shot Tippit five times. Three of those shots hit him in the chest, and he died just a few minutes later. Oswald once again immediately fled the scene on foot. He began to panic as he heard police sirens, ducking into this store until the siren noises faded. In 1963, this was actually a shoe store. The owner of the store followed him to here, the Texas Theatre. After Oswald snuck into this theater without paying, the shoe store owner notified the ticket attendant, who then, at approximately 1:40, notified the police. Oswald just hid out in here, for about ten minutes, watching the movie War is Hell, before about two dozen police officers, including sheriffs and detectives, all showed up at once and burst in. Police soon spotted Oswald sitting in the theater and arrested him, but only after Oswald punched and tried to shoot one of the officers. As soon as Oswald saw the officers coming toward him, he reportedly yelled, "Well, it's all over now!"

By this time, the country was stunned by the news of the death of their president. They were especially stunned by just how random, how crazy it was. I mean, holy crap. It happened out in broad daylight, in front of hundreds of people. And the way it happened...so violent...so violent that I can't show you the footage of it. Yes, there is footage of it, kids. Quite famous footage of it actually. The most famous footage of the assassination wasn't even released to the public until 11 and a half years later. Known simply as "The Zapruder film," it's named after the dude who filmed it, Abraham Zapruder. It's the most complete footage we have of the event and is one of the most scrutinized pieces of film in history.

Meanwhile, Jacqueline Kennedy and President Kennedy's body had returned to Air Force One. At 2:38, Vice President Lyndon Johnson, who had been riding in a car behind President Kennedy with his wife, Lady Bird at the time of the assassination, took the oath of office. 27 people surrounded him on the small plane as he was sworn in as the 36th president of the United States. What a photo that is. Man history is crazy.

That night, Oswald was charged with the murder of both President Kennedy and officer Tippit. Also that night, two doctors did an autopsy of President Kennedy's body. Most historians agree that the autopsy was...uh...not done well. The doctors were rushed and not qualified. In fact, the clumsy autopsy would later fuel conspiracy theories about the JFK assassination. Oh, a conspiracy theory is a hypothesis really, that makes the claim that a group secretly plots bad stuff. Conspiracy theories, unfortunately, often get a bad rap...well...because most of the ones people come up with are not backed up by very good evidence. And yeah, a lot of them are really wacky.

On the morning of Sunday, November 24th, Dallas police escorted Oswald to a car in the basement of their headquarters. They had planned on taking him to the county jail. At approximately 11:21, a local nightclub owner and JFK fanboy named Jack Ruby walked right up to Oswald and shot him at point blank range. And yes, that's...holy dang...yeah I still can't get over that THAT'S a real photograph. Nonfiction is way more interesting than fiction. Just saying.

Oswald was rushed to the same hospital as President Kennedy and Governor Connally, Parkland Hospital, where he died shortly after arrival. A jury later found Ruby guilty of murder...huh...go figure...and sentenced him to death. However, Ruby got his conviction appealed before dying himself of a cancer-related ailment on January 3, 1967.

Meanwhile, Kennedy's body had been brought back to Washington, D.C. Around 1200 people, including guests from at least 90 different countries, attended his funeral service at St. Matthew's Cathedral. Four days later, President Johnson called for an investigation into the assassination, putting together a team today simply known as the Warren Commission, named after the lead dude of it, Supreme Court Justice Earl Warren. The team notably also included FUTURE president Gerald Ford. The Warren Commission presented its conclusions to President Johnson on September 24, 1964. That 888-page report, which I'm just sure everybody watching this video has already read, concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald, and Lee Harvey Oswald alone, had killed Kennedy and wounded Connally.

Mr. Beat: So that's it. That's the story of the JFK Assassination.

Evan: Are you really just going to end the video already?

Mr. Beat: (Looking over to grassy knoll) Wait a second, there appears to be a second storyteller.

Yeah, Evan from the channel Necessary Information. What else is there to the story?

Evan: Oh there's plenty more to the story.

Mr. Beat: Oh you mean all the conspiracy stuff?

Evan: Obviously...mind if I take over for a bit?

Mr. Beat: Well go right ahead. That means I can go to the bathroom...maybe try to find JFK Jr.

- Evan: Awesome...

(Evan's bit)

Some think the mafia organized JFK's assassination, and that even Jack Ruby, who indeed had ties to the mafia, worked for the mafia to shut Oswald up. Others think it was the Cubans. Some even think Lyndon Johnson orchestrated the whole thing so that HE could be president. Some think Oswald couldn't have fired those three shots so quickly. That HE didn't even do it because he had no motive to. That maybe a Secret Service agent did from one of the other limos. Or some dude in a sewer. Others say lead witnesses died mysteriously.

Most who think there was a conspiracy, however, think the CIA or FBI or both were involved. Those who promote a conspiracy theory argue that there were multiple shooters- at least two, with the second being right about here. Notably, when watching the graphic Zapruder footage, which I can't show you in this video because it will get age-restricted but I'll link it in the description...show JFK going (back and to the left). But the Warren Commission insisted that experts said a bullet entering from the back could absolutely make Kennedy's body go (back and to the left). Critics of the single-bullet theory mockingly call it the "magic-bullet theory," insisting that the way he moved defies physics if shot from behind.

However, nearly all conspiracy theories surrounding the JFK assassination miss the mark. Ok, maybe that was the wrong idiom to use. Nearly all conspiracy theories fail to hit the target. Oh that was DEFINITELY the wrong idiom to use. What the heck is wrong with me.

There has never been any physical evidence that proved any of these theories could be true. Well, other than the theory that there was a second shooter at the Grassy Knoll. In 1976, the United States House of Representatives created a committee, called the House Select Committee on Assassinations, to complete a new investigation into the JFK assassination, as well as the Martin Luther King, Jr. assassination which happened in 1968. What they concluded was that Kennedy was indeed "probably" killed as a result of some sort of conspiracy and that Oswald likely didn't act alone. I bring this up because the physical evidence that helped them reach this conclusion was a recording from a police officer near Kennedy when he was shot. Acoustics experts analyzed the recording and determined that there was a 50% chance a sound representing a gunshot came from the Grassy Knoll. That said, later experts have said the recording is NOT evidence of a second shooter, with many saying the recording took place nowhere near Kennedy nor during when the shooting took place. I should also add that an overwhelming number of scientists have concluded that one bullet making Kennedy's body move (back and to the left) despite coming from behind is indeed plausible.

Despite hardly any physical evidence existing of there being a conspiracy, today most Americans continue to believe that a conspiracy was indeed behind JFK's death.²³ One person who definitely believes a conspiracy was behind it is Patricia Puckett Hall. Her grandma was Gladys Johnson, Oswald's landlord. Today Patricia owns the house, and she was the one who gave us a private tour of Oswald's bedroom. (clip)

The thing is, Hall has good reason to believe the CIA was working with Oswald. In fact, we now know that the CIA and FBI lied about knowing who Lee Harvey Oswald was. As it turns out, they had been tracking him for a while before the assassination. And how do we know this? Journalists and historians have examined declassified records, records that GOT declassified mostly due to the JFK Records Act, a law Congress passed back in 1992, in part in response to the success of the conspiracy-promoting Oliver Stone film JFK.

There is also evidence that the CIA pressured the Warren Commission to conclude that Oswald acted alone and actively prevented them from getting information about Oswald that would link him to the CIA.⁴ Indeed, the Warren Commission ignored key witnesses and gave a lot of attention to less important witnesses. It seemed to focus only on evidence that backed up its single-bullet theory and Oswald acting alone. Not only that, as I mentioned earlier, the first autopsy was messed up. Plus, look at the people who likely were just fine with Kennedy being dead, as mentioned by Evan earlier.

It's not surprising why many...MANY Americans continue to distrust the official version of events. And it shouldn't be surprising why MANY Americans think there was a second shooter at the Grassy Knoll. So wait...WAS there a second shooter at the Grassy Knoll?

First, let's get one thing out of the way. There is no doubt that Lee Harvey Oswald murdered President Kennedy. This is indisputable. The evidence is overwhelming.

But regarding a SECOND shooter? Meh, there just isn't that good evidence of that. It doesn't mean there wasn't, but it's not likely...and...uh...well...we'll probably never know, will we?

Now, this is just my opinion, but based on the recent declassification of certain CIA and FBI documents, as well as the fact that the CIA and FBI have continued to suppress classified information, I think that the claim that the both CIA and FBI knew about Lee Harvey Oswald before the assassination of JFK is mostly true. So there. That's SOMETHING. I think it's reasonable to assume they wanted to hide stuff because it made them look bad. Perhaps the CIA and FBI could have prevented Kennedy's assassination.

But what do YOU think? What do YOU think really happened on November 22nd, 1963 in Dealey Plaza, Dallas, Texas, United States of America? Let me know down below. And obviously, I left A LOT out, but what do you expect? I make introduction videos. Please do your own research. Check my sources in the description. There's some pretty good books I referenced. Also, a big thank you to Evan from the channel Necessary Information for collaborating with me for this video. It was great to hang out with him and he made this video soooo much freaking better. Go check out his channel and subscribe. Viewer discretion is advised.
