

Kravius relaxing by the ocean on the beach finally getting to relax after a long day of work the day before. As he laid back he felt a sense of unease surrounding him making him sigh heavily. As the sense of unease rattled him he tried his best to ignore it so he could have the best relaxing type of day possible for himself.

Using the spirits that floated around him he searched around looking for what could be the cause for the sense of unease he was feeling. Noticing that there wasn't anything to cause it along the beach he started to have them search along the ocean close to him at first.

One of the spirits noticed a dark shadow further away from the coast of the beach making him intrigued. Standing up he decided he was going to investigate what this shadow could be which seems to be the cause of this unease he was feeling today. He stretched his body out preparing to make a swim but as he started to walk to the water the waves were picking up in a strange fashion which made him more worried now.

The waves flowing in a square pattern made him feel super uneasy so he decided to wait them out till they died down. As he sat there he made a choice to start flying just above the water. As he flew over the ocean he let himself feel the water splash across his body feeling free and happy. As he flew to the shadow he would fly through some of the waves letting the water splash over him.

Feeling free as he flew to the shadow he dipped into the ocean flying back out letting the water splash everywhere. He smirks feeling the droplets of water hitting his skin now closing in on the strange shadow.

Feeling a stronger sense of unease as he got closer he noticed that the shadow moved around seemingly every time he got too close to it. The spirits he kept sending would try to get close to the disappearing shadow which irritated him.

He would land in the water diving down into the water to try to investigate this strange shadow. As he swam downwards he noticed that the shadow would curl away from him inside of the water. Getting irritated now with the way the shadow was trying to stay secretive from him.

Snarling now he had all of his spirits spread out moving forward towards the shadow trying to understand what it was. As the spirits moved towards the shadow it retracted leaving behind little shiny objects which Kravius was intrigued by picking them up. He held one up trying to figure out what was going on and why the shadow was dropping them as it retreated.

He gave up his chase as more of these little objects that caught his eyes. Sighing he held it up towards the light to look at his new find as the sun slightly broke through the gem giving off a light gleam through the gem. Being interested in these strange gems that the shadow dropped he collected as many as he could.