

Intro - (April 27, 2023 - I may need to update)

Hello! I am Lunmie/ChoklettHartz and here is my commissions page for fiction short stories. I have written a variety of fanfiction and original fiction. Some genres I write include romance, erotica, horror, action, fantasy, sci-fi. More importantly, I am a character driven writer and gravitate towards emotions and scenes. That being said, I am open to trying different things.

Some Things I Write

- Fanfiction
- Original Fiction
- BL
- NSFW + kinks

Some Things I Don't Write

- Hardcore non-con
- Toilet stuff

I will try out most things and some kinks might depend on the fandom or the context of the story so feel free to discuss details with me.

Process

- Tell me what you'd like to commission me to write. If it's something I'm willing to do, I'll get started on it.
- I'll present a rough outline/general idea to make sure it's what you want. At this time I'll ask for half of the payment.
- When half of the payment is received, I start writing the fic. Depending on the fic, I might ask for finer details/direction
- Once I finish, edit, and finalize the fic I will send you a copy to review.
- From there I make final edits and send you a pdf copy. At this point I'll ask for the rest of the payment.
- Normally, I will upload the fic online. If it is fanfic it will go on my Ao3. If it is not a fanfic, it will go on my ko-fi. Either way, I will tweet it and tag you. Let me know if you want to do any of that differently. These details can be discussed when we get there.

Payment: Half once I accept and present a rough outline. Second half once the pdf copy is sent. If you're a mutual, we can discuss flexibility.

Note

I've only accepted a handful of commissions, so I'm still fine tuning this sort of process. Don't be afraid to ask me questions!

A Valentine's Day Drabble

Valentine's Day. Celebration of love, full of candy, hearts, flowers. It's her favorite. She hums a mindless tune to herself while stirring a pot of sticky melted sugar. The cloying aroma fills the kitchen, smothering less pleasant smells. Beside her is a tray of heart-shaped molds for the candy. Each contains a piece of red flesh. Bits of a heart she had defrosted and cut up earlier. Once the mixture thickens, she dips a ladle in and begins filling the molds. Heart candies! She's quite proud of them. The perfect gift. After all, you give your heart to your loved one.

Maybe humanity wasn't supposed to survive. Look around at what we've been doing the past few decades and you can see what I mean. From where I'm sitting while writing this, I can see smoke in the distance, probably from a reactor. I'm about twenty stories up and on top of a slope. There's debris everywhere. Hundreds of skyscrapers, apartments, office buildings, and whatever. All empty. Mostly collapsed and a bunch of broken glass windows. They're piled in the streets with overturned cars. And you know what's funny? I've never seen the sky so clear.

He glances at Silver again, watching him from the corner of his eye. Long elegant fingers cradle the cigarette as the tip glows bright amber, and smoke billows in a thin stream from cupid bow lips.

“Thought you were quitting,” Gold says.

“I am,” Silver replies, baritone voice silk smoke, and adds after a beat. “Only one all week.” Gold’s lips quirk up.

“I always happen to catch you in the act, huh?”

Sharp eyes like the prettiest obsidian find him, just the smallest movement like a falcon. They lock him in place as if he weren’t caught already.

Well, at least it’s your usual partner- who was supposed to be taking a break tonight. You cut the engine of the car and take a deep breath.

“We’re here,” you try to say cheerfully.

“I will shoot you, I swear to god,” Tony mutters. Glancing to the side, you hold back a snort at how angry he looks. His arms are crossed over the rhinestones of the red cocktail dress he’s wearing.

“You look... fine.”

“Gee, thanks,” he hisses.

Fangs pressed against one of his marks, sending sparks down his spine. A reminder, a warning, or a promise, hard to tell with Vergil. But the way his hand caressed up his torso to his heart had Dante sighing against Nero’s lips. Tenderness from Nero was a wellspring of warmth like liquid sunshine, something Dante could always fall back on. Tenderness from Vergil was rare, perhaps would always be a novelty, an all consuming storm that Dante could never be without. And both were equally potent in swadling Dante in a sense of security so precious he wondered if he were in a dream.

The beast Asher had been fighting gave one last dying cry, and the witch scowled as he gave it one last zap of lightning, entirely unnecessary. Then he rounded on William, stormy eyes aglow. There it was.

“I had that,” Asher said in a harsh tone.

William only shrugged and adjusted the string of his crossbow. “I happened to be in the area.” He met Asher’s glare with a steady gaze. Though he was quite sure the vision he saw had passed, he couldn’t be too careful.

Asher gave him a hard, cold look before speaking again. “Well, stick to your area.”

He’s chopped liver. Literally. His liver must be chopped like this. Childe lets out a breathless giggle and chokes on his own blood. The action sends shudders through his body, muscles spasming. He wheezes as he tries to breathe. Each inhale expands his diaphragm, dragging his cut flesh more sharply against the bladed weapon impaling him through the abdomen. The pain searing through his body has him gasping, arching even further to feel the cold metal slice deeper into him. Pain building on more pain, the tantalizing dance with death.
