Course Description

Introduces teaching, learning, and curriculum in the secondary humanities classroom. Offers core instructional components for secondary credential candidates in art, English, and social studies. Includes an overview of curriculum and instruction issues for secondary classrooms. Identifies structure of knowledge in content areas as a basis for understanding curricular planning as the student teacher considers what and how to teach and for what reasons. Other topics include instructional and classroom management strategies, planning and assessment, and mandated state and local frameworks for secondary subjects. This is the third of a three-course sequence. The course will address the following TPEs: 1.3, 1.4, 1.7, 3.1, 3.2, 4.3, 5.1, 5.2, 7.9.

ELJJ Goals

We aim to prepare teachers who have the disposition and skills necessary to gather empirical evidence needed to examine and evaluate curricula, pedagogies, and assessment for justice, inclusion, transformation, and liberation. We also want to be sure that ELJJ teachers can build on their students' and their own assets to ensure that growth and learning is developmentally appropriate and healing. We expect teacher candidates in our program to identify ideologies and inequities from a critical perspective and work toward dismantling them and foster conditions that are fair and equitable. Finally, we see ourselves as a community who appreciates our shared experiences and vision to change education for the better and enjoys our collaborative work. By the end of this course, the students should be able to demonstrate their achievement toward the goals through a set of Measurable Criteria as listed following each goal:

Goal 1. Safety, Wellbeing, and Care

- a. 1. Value and aim to ensure the safety and wellbeing of every student as well as colleagues in ELJJ (and other programs).
- b. 2. Actively create a space that welcomes, includes, nurtures, and appreciates students of all backgrounds.
- c. 3. Creates and maintains a safe working and community environment for students, colleagues, and self.
- d. 4. Recognize that teaching is inherently moral and guided by an ethic of care.

Goal 2. Culturally-sustaining, anti-racist teaching

- a. Recognize that one's positionality (i.e., gender, race, sexual orientation, socioeconomic background) and life experiences biases our lens in how we one sees others, particularly those who come from vastly different positions.
- b. Demonstrate interest in learning with and from others, especially those from historically marginalized communities and who are not in positions of power.
- c. Purposely seek out the perspectives of those from nondominant backgrounds (i.e., people of color, undocumented, materially privileged, LGBTQAI).
- d. Practice intentional listening, making space for marginalized voices, in classrooms and community settings.
- e. Focus on how (not if) privileged parts of one's identity shape life and teaching practice.

Course Goals

1. Study and Application: Acquire knowledge of the foundational theories, principles, and practices of curriculum and instruction across various educational settings. Develop and implement a unit plan tailored to secondary humanities education, integrating inclusive, equitable practices that meet diverse learning needs. Integrate an understanding of the structure of knowledge in content areas like Art, English, and Social Studies, to drive curricular planning decisions. Engage with TPEs like 1.3, 1.4, and others to promote student engagement and learning. Understand and enact planning, assessment techniques, and instructional strategies effective in secondary classrooms.
2. Discussion and Engagement: Throughout the course, participants will: Actively engage in discussions anchored on assigned readings, grappling with the challenges they present. Navigate the intricacies of curriculum design and instruction, with a particular focus on inclusive, equitable practices. Demonstrate respectful and constructive engagement with peers and actively contribute to class activities.
3. Reflection: A cornerstone of the course is the emphasis on introspection and critical analysis of one's teaching methodologies. Participants will: Reflect critically on their teaching practices, discerning strengths, pinpointing areas for growth, and formulating subsequent action plans. Examine how personal positionality impacts their teaching and use reflexivity to comprehend their ideological evolution molded by schooling and socialization.
4. Justice and Liberation: This course encourages participants to: Immerse themselves in the concepts of justice and liberation within the educational sphere. Embrace teaching methods that actively counteract oppression, championing a humanized approach in classrooms, schools, and communities. Seamlessly incorporate justice and liberation ideologies into daily teaching practices, fostering learning environments that confront and dismantle predominant ideologies and inequalities.
5. Comprehensive Classroom Management: Going beyond curriculum design, participants will also: Conceive a thorough classroom management blueprint, embodying the tenets of justice- and liberation-oriented education, and integrating pertinent TPEs. Use effective methods to cultivate a caring, supportive, nurturing, and rigorous classroom community.
6. Experiential Learning: Participants will have an opportunity to: Simulate teaching scenarios, applying learned strategies, reflecting the aforementioned TPEs, and obtaining constructive feedback from peers and the course instructor. Apply socially just teaching and learning approaches that subvert prevailing ideologies, transforming both attitudes and behaviors.

Assignments

Please note this syllabus includes hyperlinks with additional information to some assignments. They will be highlighted and formatted in the same manner.

1. Classroom Management Plan \(25% of final grade\): Candidates will develop a detailed plan for managing a secondary humanities classroom, which includes strategies for maintaining an engaging and inclusive learning environment, policies for attendance, lateness, homework, and behavior, and a plan for communicating these to students and parents.

Grading criteria:

- Description of classroom environment and procedures
- Strategies for establishing a positive classroom culture
- Challenges toward building classroom community

2. Detailed ELD Lesson Plan (30% of final grade): This assignment requires students to create an in-depth lesson plan for a single class session in their subject area. The plan should be detailed enough that another teacher could step in and teach the class using this plan. The lesson plan will be evaluated based on clarity of objectives, variety and effectiveness of instructional strategies, appropriateness of assessments, and quality of materials and resources utilizing this analytic rubric.
3. Interdisciplinary Unit Plan (25% of final grade): Drawing inspiration from “Understanding by Design,” candidates are tasked with developing an interdisciplinary unit plan that spans one grading period, suitable for students from the 6th to the 12th grade. The objective is to create a unit that not only covers the breadth of the subject but also intertwines multiple disciplines to give students a holistic understanding. The plan will encompass determining the subject, grade level, and theme. Essential questions will guide the learning objectives, and a theoretical rationale will anchor the instruction to established pedagogical theories. Integration of Common Core Standards ensures the relevance and standardization of the content, while outlining essential knowledge and skills provides a clear roadmap for both teachers and students. Candidates will also recommend texts, ensuring their alignment with the learning goals, and describe both pre-assessment and summative evaluation methods. A performance assessment will offer an avenue for students to demonstrate their understanding in a practical context. To round off the assignment, candidates will present a rough calendar for the unit, indicating a tentative schedule for each topic or module. Additionally, they will have the opportunity to present their plan, incorporating an interactive feedback mechanism through Q&As, ensuring peer review and continuous improvement.
4. Reflective Essay (20% of final grade): At the end of the course, candidates will write a reflective essay discussing their learning journey throughout the three-course sequence, focusing on their growth as an educator, their understanding of secondary humanities education, and their readiness to implement what they have learned in their own classrooms. This essay serves as a mirror, reflecting their growth trajectory from the inception of the course, delving deep into their newfound understanding of secondary humanities pedagogy. Candidates will explore the nuances of the strategies they've learned, the challenges they've faced, and the victories they've celebrated. Beyond just a recounting of experiences, the essay demands a deeper analysis of their preparedness to bring their learnings to life in a real-world classroom. It's an exploration of the symbiotic relationship between theoretical knowledge and practical application, allowing candidates to evaluate their readiness to implement and adapt their learnings in diverse classroom settings. Through this essay, candidates not only assess their progress but also set a vision for their future as innovative educators. Your work will be assessed with this analytic rubric.

Grading

All assignments in this course will be graded using a point system. Class attendance and participation are required. Students will have opportunities to engage in the class through discussions, presentation, and class activities.

College policy on incomplete courses is as follows: students qualify for incomplete grades only if they have completed 2/3 of the total coursework and are responding to unforeseen circumstances. In this course, students will qualify for consideration of an incomplete only if the required internship timeline goes beyond the semester. Students who have not completed substantial coursework should not assume that they will be given an incomplete at the end of the semester.
