Panelists debate how money, morals, myths drive Americans' behavior

By Beth Griffin

Posted: 2/6/2012

NEW YORK (CNS) -- American behavior is driven by intertwined forces of money, morals and myths in a constantly shifting struggle for pre-eminence, according to participants in a debate at Jesuit-run Fordham University.

Three writers engaged one another and the audience Feb. 1 in a lively discussion on "What Rules America: Money, Morals or Myth?"

Unlimited amounts of money rule politics and lead to a "participatory inequality," according to Robert Kuttner, co-editor of The American Prospect magazine. Involvement in civic life and public institutions is the only possible counterweight to the power of wealth, he said.

Robert A. George, editorial writer for the New York Post, said the Declaration of Independence enshrines an overarching morality in the United States that has a greater impact than Judeo-Christian principles. "We have a unique vision that our sense of equality is divinely inspired. Conflicts inevitably come about because of our inability to live up to the creed of our founding statements."

He said, "Foundational morality ultimately ends up trumping religious contemporary moralities of the day. Once a debate, such as gay marriage, is argued under the rubric of equality under the law, the traditional myths, the traditional religious groups, end up having to surrender the ground."

Susan Jacoby, author of "Freethinkers: A History of American Secularism," said American exceptionalism is the country's "overarching myth."

She quoted Harvard Law School professor Randall Kennedy to describe exceptionalism as "a community of perceptions, ideas, institutions and ambitions, which posits, among other things, that the United States is uniquely virtuous, uniquely powerful, uniquely destined to accomplish great things and thus uniquely authorized to act in ways to which Americans would object if done by other nations."

Jacoby said meritocracy is a particularly perilous public myth. Meritocracy holds that only in America, "it's not where you start but where you finish, and where you finish is largely something you can control," she said.

Contrary to the myth, Jacoby said Americans have a hard time rising from one economic class to another and it is even more difficult for them to move upward within the middle class. She cited a study by the Pew Charitable Trusts that showed about a third of Americans raised in the middle fifth of income-earners move up into the next higher group as adults, while 23 percent stay on the same level and 41 percent move down.

Jacoby said the split between the myth of meritocracy and the current state of American life can be used politically in two opposing ways. In one, the government is the villain and any action it takes to enable upward social mobility for large groups seems to impinge on people who have already succeeded. Alternatively, the government has furthered mobility during crucial periods in history, such as when it used the GI Bill after the Second World War to "facilitate a mass movement of people from the working poor to the college-educated, white-collar middle class," she said.

"All of those members of the greatest generation did work hard, but they didn't 'make it on their own.' They made it during a period when the government extended extraordinary benefits to ordinary citizens."

Kuttner said, "Morals and myths matter and all are under assault by the overweening dominance of commercial values, of money."

Although the free market is generally accepted as the preferable way to run an economy, "the dogmatism of the free market economy is a hideous marriage with the political power of wealth," he said.

"Morality and myth are at risk of being submerged by the market claiming a universal imperative set of values that makes religious dogma seem positively liberal by comparison. We have to watch out for money and market if we are going to retain what is valuable in morality," Kuttner said.

"Money doesn't rule everything, but it rules a lot more than it did earlier in our history. If free public education or Social Security were before our Congress, they would be voted down," Kuttner said.

The speakers agreed that the country's political center of gravity has moved to the right and made politicians less likely to draft progressive legislation.

George said because the Declaration of Independence credits the Creator as the source of human rights, the founding document seems divinely inspired and weaves theism into society. As a result, "it will be many years, if ever, before an atheist will be president of the United States. To be president, you have to show some kind of belief."

Jacoby, an atheist, said: "There's a general stupidity in this country that does not exist in other Western societies, that thinks that anyone who doesn't believe in God is on the 'qui vive' to go out to kill and rape and murder."

The debate was sponsored by the Fordham Center on Religion and Culture and moderated by Washington Post columnist E.J. Dionne Jr.

This nomination process isn't about who Tea Party or Republican Party feels is worthy of nomination, Bain through Erickson pushed Perry out.

7 Feb

RICK SANTORUM SWEEPS 3 STATES, CONNECTING WITH CONSERVATIVES IN MINNESOTA, COLORADO, AND MISSOURI:

Santorum whips Mitt in Colo., Minn. & Mo.

WASHINGTON — Rick Santorum's presidential campaign took off last night as he swept GOP primary contests in three crucial battleground states.

Santorum crushed front-runner Mitt Romney in Missouri and Minnesota.

The former Pennsylvania senator also upset the heavily favored Romney in Colorado, 40 percent to 35 percent, according to nearly complete returns.

Newt Gingrich followed in Colorado with 13 percent, while Ron Paul had 11 percent.

"Conservatism is alive and well in Missouri and Minnesota!" Santorum told a cheering crowd of supporters in the Show Me State of Missouri.

REUTERS

BACK IN IT: Rick Santorum campaigns yesterday in Minnesota, where he rolled to an easy primary victory over Mitt Romney. He also posted big wins in Missouri and Colorado.

Taunting Romney, a buoyant Santorum said, “We doubled him up here and in Minnesota.” He told supporters they were heard “loud and louder all across this country,” adding, “Maybe in Massachusetts they were heard particularly loud tonight” — referring to Romney’s national headquarters.

Santorum’s victory in Colorado was a stinging blow to Romney, who carried the Rocky Mountain state with 60 percent of the GOP vote in 2008.

In Missouri, Santorum trounced Romney, 55 percent to 25 percent, with y all precincts reporting. Ron Paul came in third, with 12 percent. Gingrich was not on the ballot there.

In Minnesota, Santorum won, 45 percent to 27 percent for Ron Paul. Romney, who handily took Minnesota in 2008, was a distant third, with 17 percent, according to nearly complete returns. Gingrich got only 11 percent.

Santorum’s strong performances raised new doubts about Romney’s ability to win over the GOP’s conservative base.

Santorum called his wins a victory for “conservatives and Tea Party people” who are “building the base of the Republican Party,” then belittled Romney’s campaign for what he said was its chief attributes, mocking, “I’ve got the most money and the best organization.”

Romney, appearing in Colorado, told a crowd, “This was a good night for Rick Santorum. But I expect to become our nominee with your help.”

Missouri’s 52 delegates won’t be awarded until March, so last night’s primary vote there was effectively a straw poll.

But by winning more than 100,000 votes in a swing-state battleground, Santorum seized the spotlight and showed strength in an important industrial region.

Tim Pawlenty, the former governor of Minnesota, campaigned for Romney there, to no avail . Santorum blanketed all three states yesterday after bailing out of the Jan. 31 Florida primary early and spending more than 20 days in the heartland.

Gingrich abandoned the field there, spending yesterday stumping in Ohio, which doesn’t vote until Super Tuesday on March 6.

A total of 76 delegates were at stake last night, 40 in Colorado and 36 in Minnesota.

After Rick Perry's exit from the race mid-January and Rick Santorum's initial win in Iowa, Conservatives who struggled with Rick Perry's endorsement of Newt Gingrich for a variety of reasons, happily rally around Rick Santorum and make it known to the whole Nation....

Why has Rick Santorum done so well?

1) He connects with traditional family-minded and Conservative voters in a way Obama never has, most feel that Obama's family life is a political theater, for his sordid past of gay lovers and that he is not living the redeemed life he professes, with indication of affairs with Rahm Emmanuel who frequented the men's bathhouses in Chicago, as verified by the gay community, and the Obama's marital issues with 'who wears the pants' and Obama's affair with Gibbs:

WHERE SOCIAL CONSERVATISM AND FISCAL CONSERVATISM OVERLAPS, WHY RICK SANTORUM IS GREAT FOR THE GOP NOMINATION AND GREAT FOR THE COUNTRY IN GENERAL ON HIS PRO-LIFE POLICY: WHAT IS REALLY SAD: IN A TIME WHEN THE POOR HAVE INCREASED IN THE OBAMA ECONOMY TO A QUARTER OF OUR ENTIRE POPULATION, THE 10% POOR GOING TO 25%, IS NOW A WHOPPING 77,897,979...

THIS IS WHERE RICK SANTORUM REALLY REACHES CONSERVATIVES: FOR ONE, CONSERVATIVES REVILE GIVING THE GOVERNMENT MORE THAN 10% ANYWAY, WHEN WE FEEL THAT GIVING THE GOVERNMENT MORE THAN 10% MAKES THE GOVERNMENT TO BE WORSHIPED AS IF IT WERE GOD, AND SECONDLY, CONSERVATIVES SEE THAT THE GOVERNMENT HAS MISSPENT OR MISAPPROPRIATED THAT 20%: TO NOT SERVE THE POOR OR TO SERVE THE BETTERMENT OF SOCIETY, WHICH INFURIATES THEM TO NO END, ESPECIALLY WHEN PAYING 20% IS THE LAW AND POLITICIANS LIKE ROMNEY USE THE 10% DEDICATED TO GOD TO CAMOUFLAGE THEIR GROSS EARNINGS.... THIS LEAVES THE CHURCH WITH LESS RESOURCES TO GIVE TO THE POOR BECAUSE THEIR PARISHIONERS ARE TAXED UNTIL THEY ARE POOR TOO:

THE FISCAL CONSERVATIVES' ANSWER ON BEING PRO-LIFE:

WE HAVE HAD ROUGHLY A 10% POPULATION INCREASE, AND WHILE OTHERS ARE BELL YACHING REDISTRICTING MAPS WITH ACCUSATIONS OF RACISM AND GERRYMANDERING, THE TRUTH IS: EVEN WITH 3,000 ABORTIONS PER DAY, THE POPULATION IS BIGGER THAN IT EVER WAS, AND IF WOMEN HAD SEVERAL CHILDREN, THEY WOULD STOP HAVING ABORTIONS: THEY WOULD EITHER TIRE OF THE TASK GIVEN TO THEM, OR THEY WOULD OPT FOR TUBAL LIGATION OR STERILIZATION TO COMPLETE MOTHERHOOD....

WE ARE MISSING 50,000,000 YOUNG ADULTS, THE LOST YOUTH, FROM NEARLY 30YRS. OF ABORTION... EVEN IF THAT YOUTH COST $2,000 A YEAR TO SUPPORT, FOR 30YRS. THAT IS $$60,000 \times $50,000,000 = $3,000,000,000$ OR $3 TRILLION IS MISSING FROM OUR ECONOMY

THE COST OF DESTROYING HUMAN LIFE IS LIKE THROWING MONEY INTO AN ABYSS: $150,000,000,000 OR $150 BILLION TO PERFORM THE ABORTION PROCEDURE ADDED TO THE $3 TRILLION REVENUE LOST...

OR $3,150,000,000,000 -- AS IN, $3.15 TRILLION DOLLARS LOST FOREVER!

The IRS audits only slightly more than 1% of all individual tax returns annually. The agency doesn't have enough personnel and resources to examine each and every tax return filed during a year. So the odds are pretty low that your return will be picked for review. And, of course, the only reason filers should worry about an audit is if they are fudging on their taxes.

However, the chances of being audited or otherwise hearing from the IRS increase depending upon various factors, including your income level, whether you omitted income, the types of deductions or losses you claimed, the business in which you're engaged and whether you own foreign assets. Math errors may draw IRS inquiry, but they'll rarely lead to a full-blown exam. Although there's no sure way to avoid an IRS audit, you should be aware of red flags that could increase your chances of drawing unwanted attention from the IRS.

1. Making too much money

Although the overall individual audit rate is about 1.11%, the odds increase dramatically for higher-income filers. IRS statistics show that people with incomes of $200,000 or higher had an audit rate of 3.93%, or one out of slightly more than every 25 returns. Report $1 million or more of income? There's a one-in-eight chance your return will be audited. The audit rate drops significantly for filers making less than $200,000: Only 1.02% of such returns were audited during 2011, and the vast majority of these exams were conducted by mail. We're not saying you should try to make less money -- everyone wants to be a millionaire. Just understand that the more income shown on your return, the more likely it is that you'll be hearing from the IRS.

2. Failing to report all taxable income

The IRS gets copies of all 1099s and W-2s you receive, so make sure you report all required income on your return. IRS computers are pretty good at matching the numbers on the forms with the income shown on your return. A mismatch sends up a red flag and causes the IRS computers to spit out a bill. If you receive a 1099 showing income that isn't yours or listing incorrect income, get the issuer to file a correct form with the IRS.

3. Taking large charitable deductions

We all know that charitable contributions are a great write-off and help you feel all warm and fuzzy inside. However, if your charitable deductions are disproportionately large compared with your income, it raises a red flag. That's because IRS computers know what the average charitable donation is for folks at your income level. Also, if you don't get an appraisal for donations of valuable property, or if you fail to file Form 8283 for donations over $500, the chances of audit increase. And if you've donated a conservation easement to a charity, chances are good that you'll hear from the IRS. Be sure to keep all your supporting documents, including receipts for cash and property contributions made during the year, and abide by the documentation rules. And attach Form 8283 if required.

4. Claiming the home office deduction

Like Willie Sutton robbing banks (because that's where the money is), the IRS is drawn to returns that claim home office write-offs because it has found great success knocking down the deduction and driving up the amount of tax collected for the government. If you qualify, you can deduct a percentage of your rent, real estate taxes, utilities, phone bills, insurance and other costs that are properly allocated to the home office. That's a great deal. However, to take this write-off, you must use the space exclusively and regularly as your principal place of business. That makes it difficult to successfully claim a guest bedroom or children's playroom as a home office, even if you also use the space to do your work. "Exclusive use" means that a specific area of the home is used only for trade or business, not also for the family to watch TV at night. Don't be afraid to take the home office deduction if you're entitled to it. Risk of audit should not keep you from taking legitimate deductions. If you have it and can prove it, then use it.

5. Claiming rental losses

Normally, the passive loss rules prevent the deduction of rental real estate losses. But there are two important exceptions. If you actively participate in the renting of your property, you can deduct up to $25,000 of loss against your other income. But this $25,000 allowance phases out as adjusted gross income exceeds $100,000 and disappears entirely once your AGI reaches $150,000. A second exception applies to real estate professionals who spend more than 50% of their working hours and 750 or more hours each year materially participating in real estate as developers, brokers, landlords or the like. They can write off losses without limitation. But the IRS is scrutinizing rental real estate losses, especially those written off by taxpayers claiming to be real estate pros. The agency will check to see whether they worked the necessary hours, especially in cases of landlords whose day jobs are not in the real estate business.

6. Deducting business meals, travel and entertainment

Schedule C is a treasure trove of tax deductions for self-employed. But it's also a gold mine for IRS agents, who know from experience that self-employed sometimes claim excessive deductions. History shows that most underreporting of income and overstating of deductions are done by those who are self-employed. And the IRS looks at both higher-grossing sole proprietorships and smaller ones. Big deductions for meals, travel and entertainment are always ripe for audit. A large write-off here will set off alarm bells, especially if the amount seems too high for the business. Agents are on the lookout for personal meals or claims that don't satisfy the strict substantiation rules. To qualify for meal or entertainment deductions, you must keep detailed records that document for each expense the amount, the place, the people attending, the business purpose and the nature of the discussion or meeting. Also, you must keep receipts for expenditures over $75 or for any expense for lodging while traveling away from home. Without proper documentation, your deduction is toast.

7. Claiming 100% business use of a vehicle

Another area ripe for IRS review is use of a business vehicle. When you depreciate a car, you have to list on Form 4562 what percentage of its use during the year was for business. Claiming 100% business use of an automobile is red meat for IRS agents. They know that it's extremely rare for an individual to actually use a vehicle 100% of the time for business, especially if no other vehicle is available for personal use. IRS agents are trained to focus on this issue and will scrutinize your records. Make sure you keep detailed mileage logs and precise calendar entries for the purpose of every road trip. Sloppy recordkeeping makes it easy for the revenue agent to disallow your deduction. As a reminder, if you use the IRS' standard mileage rate, you can't also claim actual expenses for maintenance, insurance and other out-of-pocket costs. The IRS has seen such shenanigans and is on the lookout for more.

8. Writing off a loss for a hobby activity

Your chances of "winning" the audit lottery increase if you have wage income and file a Schedule C with large losses. And if the loss-generating activity sounds like a hobby -- horse breeding, car racing and such -- the IRS pays even more attention. Agents are specially trained to sniff out those who improperly deduct hobby losses. Large Schedule C losses are always audit bait, but reporting losses from activities in which it looks like you're having a good time all but guarantees IRS scrutiny.

You must report any income you earn from a hobby, and you can deduct expenses up to the level of that income. But the law bans writing off losses from a hobby. For you to claim a loss, your activity must be entered into and conducted with the reasonable expectation of making a profit. If your activity generates profit three out of every five years (or two out of seven years for horse breeding), the law presumes that you're in business to make a profit, unless IRS establishes otherwise. If you're audited, the IRS is going to make you prove you have a legitimate business and not a hobby. So make sure you run your activity in a businesslike manner and can provide supporting documents for all expenses.

9. Running a cash business

Small business owners, especially those in cash-intensive businesses -- think taxis, car washes, bars, hair salons, restaurants and the like -- are a tempting target for IRS auditors. Experience shows that those who receive primarily cash are less likely to accurately report all of their taxable income. The IRS has a guide for agents to use when auditing cash-intensive businesses, telling how to interview owners and noting various indicators of unreported income.

10. Failing to report a foreign bank account

The IRS is intensely interested in people with offshore accounts, especially those in tax havens, and tax authorities have had success getting foreign banks to disclose account information. The IRS has also used voluntary compliance programs to encourage folks with undisclosed foreign accounts to come clean -- in exchange for reduced penalties. The IRS has learned a lot from these programs and has collected a boatload of money ($4.4 billion so far).

Failure to report a foreign bank account can lead to severe penalties, and the IRS has made this issue a top priority. Make sure that if you have any such accounts, you properly report them when you file your return.

11. Engaging in currency transactions

The IRS gets many reports of cash transactions in excess of $10,000 involving banks, casinos, car dealers and other businesses, plus suspicious-activity reports from banks and disclosures of foreign accounts. A report by Treasury inspectors concluded that these currency transaction reports are a valuable source of audit leads for sniffing out unreported income. The IRS agrees, and it will make greater use of these forms in its audit process. So if you make large cash purchases or deposits, be prepared for IRS scrutiny. Also, be aware that banks and other institutions file reports on suspicious activities that appear to avoid the currency transaction rules (such as persons depositing $9,500 in cash one day and an additional $9,500 in cash two days later).

12. Taking higher-than-average deductions

If deductions on your return are disproportionately large compared with your income, the IRS may pull your return for review. But if you have the proper documentation for your deduction, don't be afraid to claim it. There's no reason to ever pay the IRS more tax than you actually owe.

Santorum shakes up GOP race with three-for-three finish

The Republican presidential contest is a two-man race no more. Rick Santorum proved that the 2012 primary election still has a few surprises left, after he went three for three in Tuesday's contests and once again shook up the GOP nomination battle. Santorum, in perhaps the biggest upset of the night, was declared the winner of the Colorado caucuses -- a contest Mitt Romney had been leading in recent polls and won in the 2008 race. The former Pennsylvania senator also won the Minnesota caucuses and the non-binding Missouri GOP primary.

The candidates head next into Maine, and later in the month to Arizona and Michigan. Santorum's performance stokes questions about Romney's appeal in some corners of the Republican Party but also puts the pressure on Newt Gingrich -- as he challenges Santorum's claim to be the "conservative" alternative to Romney. Santorum, though, said Tuesday night in Missouri that he wasn't looking to be the alternative to Romney.

"I stand here to be the conservative alternative to Barack Obama," Santorum said.

The three-for-three finish marked the best night of Santorum's campaign since Iowa, in which he was belatedly declared the winner.

Santorum said at his victory rally in Missouri that the night's results showed conservatism is "alive and well." Santorum used the victories to build his case that the Republicans need a nominee who can demonstrate "sharp contrasts" with President Obama -- something he claims the other candidates cannot do.

Santorum went after Romney, accusing him of holding the "same positions" as the president on several issues, but largely glossed over the other GOP candidates in his remarks.

Romney is still ahead in the delegate count, despite Santorum's big night. But Santorum's victories disrupt the narrative that the GOP presidential contest had become a two-person race between Gingrich and Romney.

With all precincts reporting in Colorado, Santorum led with 45 percent of the vote. Romney was in second with 35 percent, followed by Gingrich and Paul.

With 95 percent of precincts reporting in Minnesota, Santorum led with 45 percent. Ron Paul was pulling in second with 27 percent, followed by Romney and Gingrich.

A total of 70 delegates are up for grabs in those two states Tuesday, though the caucuses are just the start of a lengthy delegate-allocating process.

In Missouri, the primary is effectively a statewide straw poll, as it sets the stage for the delegate-awarding caucuses a month from now. Still, more than 240,000 people voted in the contest, and Santorum cruised to a crushing victory. With all precincts reporting, Santorum had 55 percent of the vote. Romney had 25 percent, followed by Paul with 12 percent. Gingrich was not on the ballot in that contest.

Turnout in the caucus states was smaller. About 66,000 showed up in Colorado; turnout in Minnesota appeared slightly lower.

Gingrich, though, hardly competed in any of the three states Tuesday, instead focusing his attention on other contests down the primary calendar. He campaigned Tuesday in Ohio, which holds its election on March 6, "Super Tuesday," as the other candidates made last-minute appeals in Colorado and Minnesota.

Romney acknowledged at his rally in Colorado that Santorum had a "good night." He went on to define himself as the only candidate, though, who has never been "compromised" by the culture of Washington. And he said he still expects to be the nominee.

"This is a time for real change in Washington -- fundamental, bold, dramatic change," Romney said.

At his post-election rally in Minnesota, Paul touted his second-place finish in the state while predicting his campaign will do well in the delegate battle -- despite the fact Paul has not yet won a primary contest.

Tuesday's contests were the first of the season in which multiple states were holding contests on one day. Up next, Maine concludes its caucuses this Saturday, and primaries will be held in Michigan and Arizona later in the month.

Romney so far has won three contests, in New Hampshire, Florida and Nevada. Gingrich has won one, in South Carolina.

Romney entered Tuesday's competition with a healthy lead in the delegate count -- at 101

Gingrich trailed with 32 delegates, following by Santorum with 17 and Paul with nine. It takes 1,144 delegates to win the nomination.

Though Missouri's primary Tuesday was largely symbolic, the contest was still expected to cost state taxpayers about $6 million.

WHY KAREN HANDEL WASN'T ELECTED GOVERNOR OF GEORGIA/WHY IT'S SO BAD THAT SUE EVERHART REMAINS FRIENDS WITH KAREN HANDEL:

Nothing could be more true when it comes this, than GA Republican candidate for Governor Karen Handel losing her lead to Nathan Deal, because at least 2,500 or more GA voters recognize that she did not collect 25% of state sales tax revenue from local businesses, (trying to pad her votes as much as she did the GA budget) and how she failed to charge former Sheriff

Clayton police burn $12M in drugs

By Marcus K. Garner

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

9:15 p.m. Tuesday, January 12, 2010

Clayton County police burned more than $12 million worth of drugs that had accumulated in the departments crowded evidence room, authorities said.

Police received a court order from a Superior Court judge to allow them to burn nearly 10,000 pounds of marijuana, crystal meth and other assorted narcotics, Clayton County police spokeswoman Lt. Tina Daniel said.

"This is in response to the audit of the police department," Daniel said.

As part of a scathing indictment of former Police Chief Jeff Turner's management of the department, county Chief of Staff Alex Cohilas cited a narcotics evidence room that was "in shambles."

The burns happened on two different occasions, last week and Tuesday, in an undisclosed, secure location, Daniel said.

"This is just a small part of the police department's aggressive efforts to fight illegal drug use and sales in Clayton County," police chief Timothy Robinson said.

The burn was done with the aid of the Clayton Fire and Emergency Services, the Clayton County Sheriff's Office and the Clayton County District Attorney's Office.

The stem cells from aborted bodies used to mass manufacture vaccines or to treat diabetes, MS, or AIDS have not been successful; however, aborted stem cells have been proven to cause rejection as manifesting in intestinal inflammation, autism in a certain percentage of vulnerable people, or causing cancer!

The government does not care if aborted stem cells give you autism or cancer, as long as they get their money back by turning you into a cash cow for insurance companies with chemotherapy treatments, which you may or may not survive. DMSO has been show to cure cancer, but because the government can't patent it and make money off of it, they'd rather see you pay up and die from chemo! There is no reason to massively fund stem cell research when the risks outweigh the benefits to the quality of life of the patient. It is unethical to say the least, and it is despicable for our government to think they can get a cut off of deciding who lives and who dies!!

KAREN HANDEL FAILING TO HOLD FORMER SHERIFF VICTOR HILL ACCOUNTABLE CAUSED CLAYTON COUNTY MANY PROBLEMS: JUST PRIOR TO KAREN HANDEL'S RESIGNATION, THIS SNAKE IN THE GRASS, FORMER SHERIFF VICTOR HILL WHO HAD NOT BEEN SEEN FOR MONTHS AFTER DECLARING BANKRUPTCY, (PUTTING HIS HOUSE UP FOR SALE, LIKELY DEFAULTING ON HIS LUXURY CAR LOANS, AND WORKING AS

Victor Hill

CLAYTON COUNTY, Ga. —

A grand jury indicted former Clayton County sheriff Victor Hill on 37 counts, alleging he used county cars for getaways and county credit cards for shopping sprees.

Hill's charges include theft by taking, making false statements and violation of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act, wrapping up a nearly year-long investigation.

A hearing was immediately held for Hill where a judge set bond at $50,000 and ordered the former sheriff to surrender his passport, remain in Georgia and not to contact any witnesses. Hill was still behind bars the next morning. His attorney said bonding companies want no part in the case.

"I've had them tell me they will not for fear that they will be decertified from being able to have bonds at the Clayton County Jail in the future," attorney Musa Ghanayem said.

Channel 2 investigative reporter Mark Winne talked to Hill before he addressed the grand jury panel Wednesday. Hill maintained his innocence and said he still plans on running for sheriff again.

"Looking forward to defending myself. I think everyone knows it's politically motivated and we're ready to get back on the campaign trail," Hill told Winne.

The grand jury started an investigation into Hill in April, and prosecutors finished their presentation on Wednesday afternoon. Hill then had the option to make a final statement before the panel voted on the charges.

Sources told Winne the special grand jury looked at the use of county credit cards, the handling of campaign finances, if there was personal travel using county equipment, if county employees engaged in campaign or personal business for Hill.

Clayton County Sheriff Kem Kimbrough has been critical of Hill, whom he won against in 2008. Kimbrough said he takes no joy in Hill's downfall but considers it vindication.

"It is not politically motivated. It is all about accountability and the integrity of the offices we hold," Kimbrough told Winne.

Kimbrough said he would be ready for Hill in another face-off.

"This is how I'm going to campaign against him," Kimbrough told Thomas, holding a copy of the indictment against Hill. "Not only was he a poor sheriff, but he broke the law."

Beatrice Powell, a former Clayton County corrections officer, was also indicted on perjury and theft by taking charges in connection with Hill's case. Investigators said they contacted her last summer about her friendship with Hill.

Investigators said they wanted to know if Powell campaigned for Hill on county time and whether he allowed her to get paid on the county's dime. Powell told investigators she committed no crime.

Hill's attorney, Steve Fry, said he will fight the charges and Hill has not violated the law. Hill is currently being held in the Gwinnett County Jail instead of the Clayton County Jail for security reasons.

IN RE: Joseph A. MACCIONE.

IN RE: Joseph A. MACCIONE.

No. S10Y1960.

-- March 25, 2011

This disciplinary matter is before the Court on the Report and Recommendation of special master James E. Patterson who recommends that this Court accept the petition for voluntary discipline which was filed by Respondent, Joseph A. Maccione (State Bar No. 462925) after the Bar filed a Formal Complaint. In his petition, Maccione requests the imposition of a Review Panel reprimand with conditions for his admitted violations of Rules 5.3 and 8.4(a)(4). Although the maximum sanction for a single violation of either rule is disbarment, the State Bar has indicated that it has no objection to the requested discipline.

In his petition Maccione, who was admitted to the Bar in 1976, admits that he is a solo practitioner who for several years regularly used the services of an employee/contractor as an investigator and paralegal. Maccione was aware that the employee/contractor had no license as an investigator, no education in paralegal studies, and an extensive criminal history. Maccione nevertheless allowed the employee/contractor to use business cards and letterhead that indicated he was an investigator and paralegal associated with Maccione's firm. Maccione also allowed the employee/contractor to prepare correspondence to clients and others, to communicate with clients, to collect retainer funds for Maccione's firm, and to generally represent to the public that he was working on cases with Maccione.

In early June 2005, Maccione agreed to represent a client on a drug charge and in a civil action the client wished to file regarding the death of his dog. After accompanying the client to a meeting with a county official about the civil matter, Maccione referred the client to the employee/contractor so that he could prepare the civil complaint which Maccione then had filed as a pro se complaint. Maccione did not clearly inform the client that he would not be handling the civil matter himself; he did not monitor the employee/contractor's activities regarding preparation of the complaint; and he did not take any action to assist the client with his civil suit. In mid-June 2005, the client was arrested and charged with murder. Maccione and the employee/contractor met with the client and advised him that Maccione and another attorney would defend the client for a flat fee of $30,000, which included attorney fees for Maccione and the other attorney. The employee/contractor then prepared a document titled "Affidavit" to be signed by the client. The affidavit authorized Maccione's law firm, generally, and the employee/contractor, specifically, to take all of the client's personal property from his home, to be applied to the cost of his defense. Maccione signed the document as a notary notwithstanding the fact that the document had been left undated and that the signature line for the witness was blank. Maccione admits that he cannot say with any certainty that he observed the client executing this affidavit.

In late June 2005, while the client was confined in a mental hospital following a suicide attempt, the employee/contractor entered the client's home and took numerous items of personal property, purportedly pursuant to the above described affidavit (and apparently as payment for the employee/contractor's services). Maccione had not discussed with the client any fee for the employee/contractor's work on his case, nor did he provide the client with any billing statements or accounting for the employee/contractor's services. The value of the property taken by the employee/contractor was not credited toward the client's quoted legal fees. The client subsequently discharged Maccione and during the course of these disciplinary proceedings, Maccione severed his relationship with the employee/contractor. As a result, Maccione no longer uses the employee/contractor's services in any capacity and asserts that he will not use those services in the future. Based on these admitted facts and having reviewed the record as a whole, we agree with the special master that Maccione violated Rules 5.3 and 8.4(a)(4) of the Georgia Rules of Professional Conduct, See Bar Rule 4-102(d). However, we disagree with the special master that a review panel reprimand is the appropriate punishment under the circumstances presented here. In light of the serious nature of the facts presented in this case, and in light of Maccione's prior disciplinary history (he received an Investigative Panel reprimand in 1989), we conclude that a review panel reprimand is not the appropriate level of punishment to impose on Maccione for his actions. Although Maccione has ended his relationship with the employee/contractor, who the Bar believes to be the “primary wrong-doer in this matter,” that does not change the fact that Maccione supervised or otherwise acquiesced in the wrongful conduct of this employee/contractor to the detriment of his client.

Accordingly, we reject Maccione's petition for voluntary discipline.

Voluntary Discipline Rejected.

PER CURIAM.

All the Justices concur.

This morning, when Karen Handel, senior vice president of public policy at Susan G. Komen for the Cure, resigned—a resignation that founder and CEO Nancy Brinker has officially accepted—Handel included, in her letter, a rather curious admission:

I openly acknowledge my role in the matter ...

Why, it seems like only last week, founder and CEO Karen Brinker was insisting that Handel did not have anything to do with this decision.

Oh, right. That's because it was last week:

Well, let me just for the record tell you, Karen did not have anything to do with this decision.

Of course, we already knew that wasn't true. As Laura Bassett at Huffington Post reported: Karen Handel was the prime instigator of this effort, and she herself personally came up with investigation criteria," the source, who requested anonymity for professional reasons, told HuffPost. "She said, 'If we just say it's about investigations, we can defund Planned Parenthood and no one can blame us for being political.'"

In her resignation letter, Handel insists that "the controversy related to Planned Parenthood has long been a concern to the organization." But as Bassett also reported, according to a source at Komen:

Komen's been dealing with the Planned Parenthood issue for years, and you know, some right-wing groups would organize a protest or send out a mailing every now and then, but it was on a low simmer [...]
What Karen's been doing for the past six months is ratcheting up the issue with leadership. Every time someone would even mention a protest, she would magnify it, pump it up, exaggerate it. She's the one that kept driving this issue.

There really is no question that Karen Handel joined Komen last year with an agenda to defund Planned Parenthood. That was part of her platform during her failed, Sarah Palin-endorsed run for governor in Georgia; it was clearly part of her mission at Komen too. For the past week, Brinker has insisted that Handel had nothing to do with the decision, and that the decision had nothing to do with politics. But it has become increasingly clear that Nancy Brinker is lying. And now Handel has confirmed it.

Report: Planned Parenthood Groups Engage in Medicaid Fraud

A report released today by two leading pro-life organizations alleges more Planned Parenthood affiliates have engaged in fraud than the ones that have already become public knowledge and part of an investigation of the abortion business by Congress.

Today the Alliance Defense Fund and the Susan B. Anthony List released a new report to Congress identifying waste, abuse, and potential fraud by Planned Parenthood. ADF attorneys prepared the report to aid Congress in its investigation of the nation's leading abortion business. The report alleges that millions of dollars of waste, abuse, and potential fraud have been revealed in state and federal audits across the country. It identifies twelve types of potential fraud being committed by Planned Parenthood affiliates nationwide, including fraudulent billing and reimbursement by Title XIX agencies for medications and/or services provided in connection with an abortion, illegal under federal law.

The billing violations include billing in excess of actual acquisition cost or other statutorily approved cost of contraceptives and Plan B products as well as inappropriately billing for services that were not medically necessary, billing for multiple initial prenatal care visits, and incorrectly billing initial, follow-up, and postpartum services.

“After 40 years of receiving taxpayer funds, not one oversight hearing of Planned Parenthood has occurred. Now is the time for such scrutiny on behalf of its most important benefactor, American Taxpayers,” SBA List president Marjorie Dannenfelser said today.

She said the report detailed “findings of systemic financial waste, abuse and potential fraud spanning many years” – problems that “reveal a pattern of gross financial mismanagement.”

“Planned Parenthood receives 46 percent of its budget from taxpayers,” Dannenfelser said.

“Taxpayers spend over $1 million a day on this nonprofit entity which reports over a billion dollars of net assets. No organization is entitled to taxpayer funds especially one mired in controversy and under investigation. Organizations who receive such largess from taxpayers deserve scrutiny.”

“Planned Parenthood campaigns to destroy those who ask questions should be a matter of questioning itself. Their current posture of entitlement is that of a spoiled teenager, not a mature non-profit committed to programs with integrity,” she added. “Congressman Stearns took a prudent and responsible action in committing to oversight hearings. There is much to scrutinize. We encourage him to pursue them now, and the Congress to watch closely.”

“Americans deserve to know if their hard-earned tax money is being funneled to groups that are misusing it,” said ADF Senior Counsel Steven H. Aden. “Planned Parenthood has to play by the same rules as everyone else. It certainly isn’t entitled to a penny of public funds, especially if it is committing Medicare fraud.”

The ADF report found:

* Federal and state audits of family planning funding have found a minimum of $95,742,982.15 in waste, abuse, and potential fraud from 1995 to 2009;

* Of this waste, abuse, and potential fraud, at least $7,867,547.15 has been identified in separate state audits to have occurred in a total of seven audited Planned Parenthood affiliates in New York state, California, Washington state, and Texas due to a variety of abuses, including extensive overbilling and illegal billing for abortion-related procedures that are ineligible for government reimbursement under federal laws, including the Hyde Amendment;

Related Links

- Support the Investigation of Planned Parenthood

* These audited amounts include both state and federal funds under the various matching formulas for these programs;

* In addition, federal audits of family planning programs from 1995 to 2009 have identified a total of nearly $88 million in overbilling, with the sum rising as high as $99 million according to the Inspector General's Office at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services;

* Of the 38 federal family planning audits covering federal funding streams and 19 states, two audits, in New Jersey and New York, specifically identified Planned Parenthood, and only Planned Parenthood, as a source of overbilling in the family planning programs. The combined waste in these two audits alone was $1,516,312.

* All told, extensive waste, abuse, and potential fraud have been identified to date in 9 percent of Planned Parenthood's 79 U.S. affiliates. Two others, one in Texas and one in California, are the subject of federal whistleblower lawsuits by former Planned Parenthood employees alleging fraud;

ADF concludes: "The extent of possible waste, abuse, and potential fraud at the nation's remaining percent of Planned Parenthood affiliates is unknown and merits congressional review by the House Energy and Commerce Committee. This investigation is especially pertinent given Planned Parenthood Federation of America's extensive management, operational, and fiscal authority over the policies and conduct of its affiliates, as well as its ongoing requirement that each of its affiliates avoid deficits in its expendable net assets."

By Mike McIntire, New York Times

Two American brothers of a Mexican casino magnate who fled drug and fraud charges in the United States and has been seeking a pardon enabling him to return have emerged as major fund-raisers and donors for President Obama's re-election campaign.

The casino owner, Juan Jose Rojas Cardona, known as Pepe, jumped bail in Iowa in 1994 and disappeared, and has since been linked to violence and corruption in Mexico. A State Department cable in 2009 said he was suspected of orchestrating the assassination of a business rival and making illegal campaign donations to Mexican officials.

When The New York Times asked the Obama campaign early Monday about the Cardonas, officials said they were unaware of the brother in Mexico. Later in the day, the campaign said it was refunding the money raised by the family, which totaled more than $200,000.

Egypt's ruling generals play risky game with U.S. February 08, 2012 09:28 AM By Hamza Hendawi

AP Associated Press

CAIRO: Egypt's ruling generals are playing a risky game of brinksmanship by cracking down on American nonprofit groups that promote democracy, threatening a relationship with Washington that has brought the military billions of dollars in aid over the past three decades. The generals may be betting the U.S. cannot afford to cut relations with Egypt - a cornerstone of American Mideast policy. But the ruling military council may also fear it has much more than foreign aid to lose if it fully embraces a democratic transition that could bring civilian oversight of its substantial financial assets and curb its long-standing domination of politics.

Egypt on Sunday referred 19 Americans, including the son of U.S. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood, and 24 other employees of pro-democracy nonprofit groups to trial before a criminal court on accusations they illegally used foreign funds to foment unrest in the country.

Speaking with reporters in downtown Los Angeles, LaHood said his son is safe.

"I talk to him a couple of times a day," said LaHood. "I talked to him this morning - I'll talk to him again this evening. Thank God he is safe. That's about all I'm going to say about that."

The referral came one day after U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton warned Egypt that failure to resolve the dispute may lead to the loss of American aid.

"I think we have to have every aspect of our relationship with Egypt examined until these people are removed from any indictment and allowed to leave or do whatever they need to do,"

Republican Sen. John McCain, the top Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said in Washington.

The depth of the tensions was evident when an Egyptian government delegation abruptly canceled meetings in Washington with U.S. lawmakers set for Monday and Tuesday.

"We understand that we have a real strategic interest in keeping good relations with the Egyptians. It's the biggest country in the Arab world," said Sen. Joe Lieberman, an Independent from Connecticut. "But on the other hand, we can't just sit back when Americans get charged and potentially incarcerated for what are trumped up charges, ridiculous," said Lieberman, who together with McCain spoke to reporters after a meeting with the Israeli foreign minister.

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman John Kerry, a Democrat from Massachusetts, admonished the Egyptians, calling their referral to trial a "slap in the face to Americans who have supported Egypt for decades and to Egyptian individuals and NGOs who have put their futures on the line for a more democratic Egypt."

Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy said that Cairo ignores at its own peril a provision he authored about U.S. aid to Egypt. The provision requires the Secretary of State to certify to Congress that Egypt is supporting the transition to civilian government by holding fair elections and establishing policies "to protect freedom of expression, association, and religion, and due process of law" before Cairo gets $1.3 billion in military aid this year.

"Unless they're following what we put in the amendment, there's no way they should be getting any money. Right now they're not following what we put in there," Leahy, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee's foreign operations subcommittee, told reporters.

Egypt and the United States have been close allies for more than three decades. But Cairo's campaign against the pro-democracy groups could seriously damage relations with far-reaching ramifications in a region already shaken by the political realignments arising from Arab Spring revolts.

Republican Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, chairwoman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, demanded that Egypt return all assets and funds seized in the raids of the NGOs, allow them to reopen their offices and end the investigations and prosecutions.

"The Egyptian government's actions cannot be taken lightly and warrant punitive actions against certain Egyptian officials, and consideration of a cutoff of U.S. assistance to Egypt," she said.

The substantial U.S. military aid to Egypt is linked to its adherence to an American-mediated 1979 peace treaty with Israel, Washington's closest Middle East ally. The preservation of that cold peace has long been a foundation of U.S. policy in the Middle East.

Besides the $1.3 billion in U.S. military aid, Egypt also receives about $250 million in economic aid every year.

In return, Egypt transformed itself since the 1970s from a one-time Soviet ally hostile to the West into an anchor of U.S. policy in the region, fighting Islamic militancy, mediating in the tortuous Arab-Israeli peace process and assuming a key role in the U.S.-led war against terror.

"The ruling military council is playing a game of high-stakes poker, believing that the U.S. cannot afford to cut its relations with Egypt," said Ziad A. Fahmy, a Middle East expert at Cornell University. "However, even more important than the annual $1.3 billion in U.S. aid is the potential threat of democratic civilian oversight over the Egyptian military budget."

The U.S.-Egypt dispute began last month with raids by Egyptian security forces on 17 offices of 10 advocacy groups, denounced by the U.S. and other countries. It also reinforced charges by Egyptian protesters and activists that the military rulers who took over a year ago from President Hosni Mubarak are perpetuating his regime's oppressive tactics.

"It is clear to all that this campaign ... aims to take revenge on groups that revealed violations by the military council since it took power," said a statement by the Arabic Network for Human Rights Information, a prominent Egyptian rights group.

The investigation into the work of the nonprofit groups is closely linked to the political turmoil that has engulfed the nation since Mubarak's ouster. The generals charge that the groups fund and support anti-government protests. They claim that "foreign hands" are behind the opposition to their rule and frequently charge that the protesters are receiving funds from abroad in a plot to destabilize the country.

The dispute between the military and the pro-reform groups has sharply polarized Egypt. And it has raised baffling questions about why the military rulers would risk so much just a few months before they plan to hold presidential elections and hand over power to an elected government at the end of a turbulent transition.

Much like their mentor Mubarak, the ruling generals have been deeply distrustful of the pro-democracy and human rights groups, which have energetically campaigned over much of the past year against the military's torture of detainees, the hauling of at least 12,000 civilians, many of whom protesters, before military tribunals and their perceived reluctance to dismantle the legacy of Mubarak's 29-year rule.

Some activists say they are preparing legal cases against the generals for the death of at least a 100 protesters since they took power and their human rights abuses. If such cases go to court, the generals could face charges similar to those for which Mubarak is on trial. He could face the death penalty if convicted.

Authorities in Egypt have never been comfortable with nonprofit groups promoting rights and democracy operating in the country. That they are bound by law to register with authorities before they can operate and can only receive foreign funds through official channels have been the two main points of contention between the two sides.

London-based Amnesty International called on Egyptian authorities to drop the charges, saying they are based on "repressive" Mubarak-era laws that have been criticized by U.N. bodies for years.

"These international associations have become the latest scapegoats as the authorities desperately spin their story of foreign conspiracies," said Hassiba Hadj Sahraoui, Deputy Director of Amnesty International's Middle East and North African Program.

Amnesty urged the newly elected parliament, dominated by Islamists, to shoot down a newly proposed civil society draft law proposed by the military-appointed government which seeks to tighten the noose around the work of pro-democracy groups, and maintains restrictions on foreign funding and political activities of such organizations.

Puddle of Mudd Singer Arrested in January for Drug Possession

Last month, mere weeks after being cited by the government for owing more than $60,000 in back taxes, Puddle of Mudd singer Wes Scantlin was nabbed for felony drug possession, TMZ reports.

The arrest occurred at 3AM on Jan. 12 in Culver City, Calif., the gossip site reports. After stopping the rocker for an undisclosed traffic violation, police apparently noticed signs of intoxication and found Scantlin to be in possession of powder and pills.

Despite his tax woes, Scantlin was able to post $10,000 bail and head home a few hours after being booked. Unfortunately, he may have gone home to an empty house, as back in November, he filed for divorce from his wife, model Jessica Nicole Scantlin.

Here's hoping the Mudd main man emerges from the muck and turns his year around.

Demi Moore Is in a Treatment Facility: Source

Demi Moore has not been spotted since a health crisis in January sent her to the hospital, but PEOPLE has confirmed that the actress is in treatment.

According to a source close to the situation, the actress is in a facility and not at home still in Los Angeles, as some have speculated.

On Saturday, E! News reported that Moore, 49, checked into Cirque Lodge in Utah the week after her Jan. 23 hospitalization.

"She's on total lockdown and only talking to a small group of people," a source tells E!, adding that the actress is being treated for addiction and an eating disorder.

A 911 call from Jan. 23 revealed that Moore had smoked a substance "similar to incense" and that she was "convulsing," according to the female caller. Paramedics who responded assessed the actress, then took her to the hospital.

Moore, who underwent rehab for drug and alcohol abuse in the mid-'80s, has been going through a rough time lately.

In November, she split from her husband, Ashton Kutcher. But even before her split from Kutcher, friends were worried.

"Really, it was over the last year her friends saw a change," a source recently told PEOPLE. "She wasn't sleeping as well, didn't seem to be eating and looked really gaunt."

On Friday, Moore's youngest daughter Tallulah celebrated her 18th birthday at dad Bruce Willis's Beverly Hills home along with her sister, Rumer.

Because of mine house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house. Churlish souls stint their contributions to the ministry and missionary operations, and call such saving good economy; little do they dream that they are thus impoverishing themselves. Their excuse is that they must care for their own families, and they forget that to neglect the house of God is the sure way to bring ruin upon their own houses. Our God has a method in providence by which He can succeed our endeavours beyond our expectation, or can defeat our plans to our confusion and dismay; by a turn of His hand He can steer our vessel in a profitable channel, or run it aground in poverty and bankruptcy. It is the teaching of Scripture that the Lord enriches the liberal and leaves the miserly to find out that withholding tendeth to poverty. In a very wide sphere of observation, I have noticed that the most generous Christians of my acquaintance have been always the most happy, and almost invariably the most prosperous. I have seen the liberal giver rise to wealth of which he never dreamed; and I have as often seen the mean, ungenerous churl descend to poverty by the very parsimony by which he thought to rise. Men trust good stewards with larger and larger sums, and so it frequently is with the Lord; He gives by cartloads to those who give by bushels. Where wealth is not bestowed the Lord makes the little much by the contentment which the sanctified heart feels in a portion of which the tithe has been dedicated to the Lord. Selfishness looks first at home, but godliness seeks first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, yet in the long run selfishness is loss, and godliness is great gain. It needs faith to act towards our God with an open hand, but surely He deserves it of us; and all that we can do is a very poor acknowledgment of our amazing indebtedness to His goodness. The Tea Party Lobby 1.972.628.0080/teapartychief@gmail.com took email, twitter, and Facebook feedback and proposed CUTS to local programs http://Ink.ms/RCtmn AND fed pgms http://Ink.ms/RCtmq.
