Punk Bassist/Maid Cafe Waitress

Ikumi and Jun's Senpai

Naomi grew up in a broken home where her parents fought every night. She had countless nights of locking herself in her room, putting on her noise cancelling headphones and blasting her favorite hardcore punk rock bands to drown out the verbal and physical violence that would occur in her household. Most nights, she would sneak out her bedroom window to go out drinking with her older adult friends.

During her senior year of high school, a couple of freshmen girls caught Naomi's attention with the way they would dress and act during and after school hours. Once she overheard their conversations about seeing some of the latest local punk bands live, it was time for her to introduce herself to what would become her future band mates.

After graduating high school, Naomi immediately packed all her belongings and left her home without looking back for her new life with freedom. She was able to find a cheap run down apartment that her part time job at a maid cafe could afford.

Naomi has one goal in her life, to make it as a famous punk rocker to act as a role model to all the younger girls. She has put herself up to the challenge of having those late nights to go to perform at a punk rock show after finishing a shift at her job.

She'll do anything for the money to help keep her freedom and not have a deplorable return to her toxic home, even if it includes taking certain risks...
