Japanese Feudalism Script

Step 1

It is winter of the year 1625. The emperor has died and a new emperor is set to take power. You have come to the palace to see the new emperor. Along the way you see thousands of samurai in the city and begin to wonder why.

Step 2

The chaos of the leadership change has calmed a bit. Spring has arrived and it is time to plant the fields. The Shogun decides to put some of his family in charge of the estates to help manage the peasants.

Step 3

You've had a good spring and now summer has come. The snow is quickly melting off of mount fuji. Fall will be coming soon and the weather will be changing. Farm while you still can.

Step 4

It is now fall. The leaves are changing and it is time to harvest your crops. You've heard a few rumors about foreign enemies gathering at your border but you haven't seen anything to prove that true – still, it is a good idea to be safe.

Step 5

It is November. The snow is returning to mount Fuji and the fields of rice have died off. There is now no doubt that enemies are coming. Your Shogun has told you to prepare for danger because it could come at any time and from any place.

Step 6

The war has ended and life goes on. Winter is here and thankfully your people have stocked up enough food. It will certainly be another interesting year.
