- Each state and territory have a victim compensation program to reimburse crime victims for the cost of medical services, mental health counseling, lost wages, and other expenses incurred due to the crime. State statutes govern victim compensation benefits so that eligibility may vary among states.

*Disclaimer: This guide is not exhaustive or endorsed.

Contact the compensation program in the state where the crime occurred for more information on eligibility and the application process. To find the appropriate victim compensation program, visit our Help in Your State page and click the state where the crime occurred.

A local victim assistance program may also assist you with filing a victim compensation claim. Contact VictimConnect for a referral in your area.
