

The whole “So many limits” and “Steward Limits Explain” threads on the forum got me thinking: How often players actually breed millionaire thoroughbreds, and how important fair Stewardbred auctions are.

I have spent a crazy amount of time today researching this, I am sure my husband is not impressed lol

My conclusion is, there is no better way to get a millionaire than to buy a stewardbred. I crunched the numbers on all the “Big” or “Rich” barns I could think of and it’s surprising how many Hall of Famers, and the few other big barns I could think of in addition, millionaire numbers aren’t overly impressive. Many bred their first millionaires within their first few crops, some even have millionaires in almost every crop, but the average millionaires for all of their breeding careers is 0.6% and the median is 0.5%.

Now, those are established barns, nothing that a newer or mid level barn has in their breeding shed could even come close to comparing to. Even some of the “Rich” barns have a 0.0% millionaire average, and they have been building their barns for years and years. So what are the chances of a new, low, or mid level barn breeding a millionaire? I would say extremely low, unless you hit lightning and get the random slide everyone so desires or you have help via an amazing lease.

So this leads to the Trial By Summer auctions. The Steward is magic, we all know it. Her millionaire average is 12.95%, her WORST foal crop millionaire average was 6.31%. So should anyone really be breeding? Or should we all just take risks putting all our money into Stewardbred auctions? THIS is why the rich people will buy your pinhooks to sit on and see if they improve, because there is a 6.31-29.83% chance that that horse will be a millionaire. THIS is why the rich people want to be able to buy more than the three limit. THIS is why you should want as many Stewardbreds as you can get your hands on. THIS is why larger auctions are important to new, low, and mid barns, the chances of us breeding a millionaire in our first few crops is next to impossible these days. The game is completely different now vs 50, 30, or even 20 SIM years ago.

It seems the only way for people to be competitive in the game, in the big races at least, is to own a Stewardbred, even when the big barns with generations in their breeding barn produce stakes and freaks they struggle to compete with Stewardbreds who have the same gallops.

Anyway! I feel like I am talking in circles! Onto the research!

Here are The Steward’s breeding stats:

THE STEWARD
