

The library seems like a natural fit for a place to honor and celebrate WEB Du Bois--a prolific writer whose work remains one of the most important contributions to the field of sociology and to tracing and unpacking our country's history with race and racism (among other things). It's nearly impossible to overstate the impact of his writing and life's work on this country's history. His books and essays are still read and discussed across the world, and his observations and critical thinking are as prescient then as they are now. It's truly an amazing thing, to think that Du Bois grew up walking the same streets we live on today--and it's time that the town continue on the path of embracing and celebrating our most famous native son.

Vanessa LaGrande