Psychological Profile

Kazi Winters is an extremely hyperactive member of staff, constantly bursting with energy and consistently being on the move. Alongside this they are quite the conversationalist, always wanting to talk to people, of which the conversations can go on for hours. In these conversations, they can be quite narcissistic, putting themselves above others and having an overall ego complex as an individual.

Known Information:

As said above - Kazi Winters is quite a dislikable individual. Although commended because of their skills, and their ability to perform well as a DEA Agent, they have a major dislike of other people, lack friends, and view themselves above others, being willing to put others down to put themselves up. There seems to be no reason related to this, other than them just being a narcissist.

History:

Kazi has an extremely basic history. There's no real incident that pinpoints them joining the Foundation. I mean, they were recruited because of their military background, ranked Staff Sergeant they exceeded in their line of work, and as such we picked them up, gave them the offer to join, and they did. Originally they were put to work in the General Security DPT, but after a few months of working there, they eventually grew bored, and decided to join the DPT of External Affairs. After joining the DPT, they were made to choose a codename. They decided to choose the codename "Puppy" because of their love for dogs, and how they're one of the only things they show affection towards. While working in DEA, they have had lots of success in their operations, gathering a plethora of intel on the Chaos Insurgency, calling out raids, and countering raids to the best of their ability. This has allowed them to achieve the rank of Senior Agent within the DPT.
