DESCRIPTION

Colombina D. Weiss is a young woman in her mid-20's, harmless at first glance, she is extremely machiavellian at heart, as she excels in manipulation and sweet-talking to those that she knows will benefit her. She masks this side of herself easily, finding it rather easy to pretend to be a dependable mentor or a sweet friend, but she does it so the people around her are easily controlled to her whims. She dresses herself plainly to emphasize her harmlessness. She always wears a silver necklace with a teardrop diamond pendant. She wears a thin silver ring on her ring finger.

Only a few people from her past know about her standoffish and prickly personality. In spite of her privileged upbringing, she is an extremely hard worker at heart. Nothing can stop her from achieving what she wants, to the point of extreme obsession. She was an exemplary student in university and during her time as a research assistant.

She is quite charming, both visually and through the way she interacts with people. She enjoys having control over situations or people to ensure that everything goes as she wishes. She does have a soft spot for people or things that she deems to be weaker than her – she usually likes to take them under her wing. Not for magnanimous reasons, no, but rather, it was to prove to her destined one on her judgement day that indeed, she deserved THEIR love.

Colombina is extremely self-driven, but the goals that she sets for herself are often arbitrary, as she uses it as a subconscious desire to take control of her own life. Deep inside, she desires to be loved unconditionally - loved despite all her flaws and imperfections that she hides behind the mask that she wears. All that glitters is not gold – she too, was just a normal girl trying to find her way in life.

BACKGROUND

Her story starts with a white dove, flying high in the sky, and into the loving embrace of THEM. In the instant that the bird had touched THEM, its mortal body split into a million pieces, becoming ONE with THEM.

THEY had saved the dove from the pain of existing out of LOVE.

And Colombina desired that love. She desired to become ONE with THEM.

Born the only child to wealthy parents, she was named Colombina as she was as lovely as a 'little dove'. Raised in her father's expansive estate, she was loved by everyone around her. Anything she wanted she would get without as much as having to lift a finger. The young Colombina quickly understood that she was born different and was destined to something greater than all others in the world. She was groomed to be the heir to her father's company, and soon the love that her parents gave her became conditional. She needed to prove herself to be worthy of his fortune. This stifled Colombina – she had to become perfect, unselfish, magnanimous... someone that she hated pretending to be.

With any tragic beginning to a heroine's story, Colombina's entire family was wiped out in a car crash, caused by an unknown entity. It was later confirmed by the police that it was just a drunk driver that had lost control of their car.

But Colombina knew that was a lie. She had seen THEM that day, and THEY had spared her life... leaving her with a memento of the visit - a ring. She rejoiced, for God had come to her and chosen her to be THEIR bride. THEY had chosen her to be LOVED.

She passed reconditioning easily. These people wanted her to believe one thing, so she humored them and believed their little excuse. She knew it – she had to prove herself to be worthy of being loved by THEM. She needed to prove that she would be suitable to be THEIR bride.

From then on, Colombina never stopped chasing after her destiny. She searched the far ends of the Earth to find THEM again, so that they could consummate their love. She exploited her deceased father's connections to jump between countries and jobs, hoping to find any thread of THEIR whereabouts.

Through various means, she eventually found out the name of a prominent professor studying the production of "a new source of energy" at a well-known university. Of course, the professor was under heavy NDA and worked at the university as a front. But this was an easy task for Colombina. She bribed the University's president with money, allowing her to enroll in the school. Then, she pretended to be the perfect student, always showing up to her professor's office hours and submitting assignments two weeks early.

It was so easy making that man fall in love with her. She was young and energetic and the professor desired love and companionship. She slept with him with the intention of accessing his research, which she was able to obtain. He was easily manipulated to take her under his wing as a research student. With him, she learned about THEM. The angels. However, the ones that the professor had researched were not the ones she was looking for. They were not her destined one.

After she graduated, she continued to work with the professor, but it seemed like his research had stagnated. She had already grown bored of him in second year, so it was easy for her to choose to discard him. However, before she could dump him, he was offered a new research position at an electric utility company.

She knew she couldn't let that imbecile continue researching Enkephalin without her. So, she did the only thing that made sense to her: she killed him. Him being alive is a hindrance to her. As such, having given her access to most of his possessions, Colombina was able to forge her dead lover's signature and recommended her for the job instead.

Her final destination was Antarctica.

She could feel THEM singing to her... she could hear THEIR voice beckoning her from within the low electrical hum.

TRIVIA

- Colombina has slept with many of her father's business partners in order to get access to information she desired. She views her body as a tool, and only maintains its upkeep in order to use it for her benefit.
- She carries a little bag full of make-up and other miscellaneous tools that she would find useful
- She's extremely picky about her food, almost like a child. Often just likes to order chicken nuggets and fries at a restaurant
- Despite being born wealthy, she is very stingy about money.
- Self-learned how to do her own nails. Can do a neat manicure!
- Has a soft spot for things weaker than her (animals, people, plans). Dislikes hanging out with people who she deems to have power over her.
