VII. Lunchroom Support

- Dr. Parrish establishing expectations: students have a moment of refreshment with peers before going out to recess, finally have five lunch monitors (which is a very tough position to hire for), it can take a moment for those monitors to build a sense of position within the lunchroom (which can be challenging when various days, and people who are in there, throw off how well the cafeteria flows), reasonable volume so they can hear direction, want them to learn manners and social skills (like a restaurant), monitors felt a lot of pressure as they are being watched by parents on PICNIC PALS days, all in agreement that harsh yelling should not be a part of how adults are interacting with kids, staff is still welcoming of emails, kids are expected to raise hands for any needs, expect everyone to treat each other with respect, expect them to throw away trash at designated time, open to ideas to try, how can we utilize positive reinforcements (ideas are being discussed and hopefully launched after thanksgiving), considering putting noise softening things on the walls, posters on the wall with expectations, who is interested in piloting and forming the committee for helping (Cierra for banner)?, Mary Kay would love to bring back in Comfy Cafe

VIII. Playground Progress Update

- michelle met with Dr. Jernigan, Mike, and Dan to discuss the bond assignment and how to be used, quote for path is $65k (and $13k for the crushed rock in between), swings, climbing structures, and soccer goals will cost about $60k that we are working to implement very soon likely this school year, want to really try to push for the track for next year
