<< Include all the following, not necessarily in this order>>

Main paragraph(s)

Author: Leigh Bardugo

Title (punctuated correctly, probably italics): Six of Crows

SWBS (brief summary 3-4 sentences max): In "Six of Crows" by Leigh Bardugo, Kaz Brekker and his crew of six is given a job to break into the Ice Court and bust out a great scientist. But the thing is, the Ice Court is the most well protected place in all of the world, and it's not so simple. So he goes and devises a plan, blows up a giant tree that's holy, (as you do) and gets back to Ketterdam to get his pay. But does he get his pay?

Theme: Often when people are bound by thin strings of trust, then is when people prosper and thrive.

Rating w/reasons: I rate Six of Crows 10/10, this is because even though there are changes in perspective, it's always so smooth. The thousands of funny, dreadful, and shocking moments always intertwine into a perfect story of heist and humiliation.

Who would enjoy? I think that people that can handle some peril, and kinda taxes, would love this book. It's a perfect, mid-sized, book.

Optional: Warnings about language or content: there's taxes kinda.

- Book math, Thievery + Trust + Betrayal = Six of Crows
- Question Pitch: Will Kaz Brekker and his crew get their promised 30 million kruge, or will they die trying?
- One word pitch: Heist
