

Practitioners Reflect #UUSStopTheClock

The pride of place we youth workers took. This will stay with us. The ideas presented of simplicity - that conversation is the central driver for youth work; in sparking new ideas, in hearing myself speak, in hearing my words understood by someone else. The papers and workshops were master classes of conversation, where ideas were floated, another participant catches them and forms it into a paper aeroplane flown to another. This is how we do youth work with grown up people.

By Eliz McArdle

