

Americans Feel Most Comfortable Talking About Climate Change With Friends and Family

ACPS 2023 Vol. II
Social Toolkit

Resources

Social Cards

Blog and PDF Full Report

Video Brief | Clip

eA Social Accounts

Twitter: @ecoAmerica

Facebook: @ecoAmerica

LinkedIn: ecoAmerica

Instagram: @eco_America

Newsletter Blurb

Many climate activists have been working for years to transform climate change into a kitchen-table issue, and new research suggests these efforts have succeeded. ecoAmerica's latest report explores who Americans feel comfortable talking with about climate change, revealing that family and friends are at the top of the list. Read Americans Feel Most Comfortable Talking About Climate Change With Friends and Family to dive deeper into the findings.

Tweets

NEW RESEARCH: 67% of Americans say they feel comfortable talking about climate change with their family. Read @ecoAmerica's latest American Climate Perspectives Survey for more: https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/

Who do you feel comfortable talking about climate change with? 64% of Americans feel comfortable talking about the issue with their friends. More findings from @ecoAmerica's latest American Climate Perspectives Survey are available here:

<https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

#ClimateChange

. @ecoAmerica's latest American Climate Perspectives Survey finds only 29% of Americans feel comfortable talking about climate change with their co-workers. What about other social groups? Read the report here:

<https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

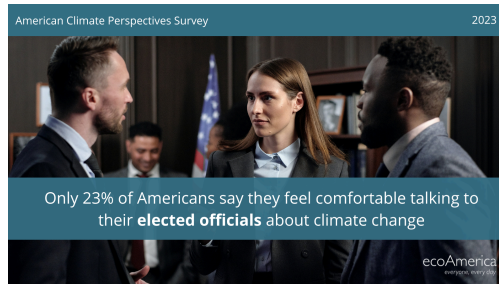

Did you know that only 27% of Americans say they feel comfortable talking about climate change with their neighbors? Learn more about climate change communications in @ecoAmerica's latest American Climate Perspectives Survey:

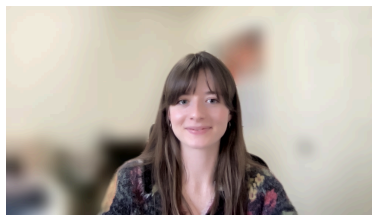

<https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

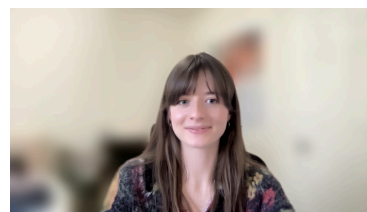

Despite political will needed for #ClimateSolutions, only 23% of Americans say they feel comfortable talking to elected officials about the issue. Many Americans, though, feel comfortable talking to friends & family. Find out more in @ecoAmerica's latest report: <https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

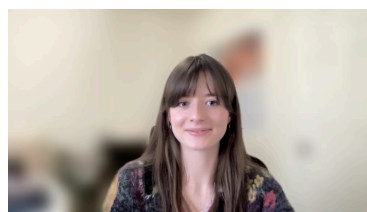

A new #LetsTalkClimate episode about @ecoAmerica's latest American Climate Perspectives Survey featuring @ANicoleHill and @jazzyjen_16 is available now on our YouTube channel! Check it out here: <https://youtu.be/k7kFJJJef04>

New #LetsTalkClimate now available! @ecoAmerica's @ANicoleHill and @jazzyjen_16 recorded a brief overview of the latest survey findings "Americans Feel Most Comfortable Talking About Climate Change with Friends and Family" watch it now: <https://youtu.be/k7kFJJJef04>

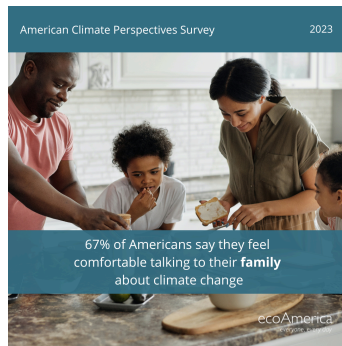

Did you know that only 23% of Americans say they feel comfortable talking to elected officials about #ClimateChange This #LetsTalkClimate episode from @ecoAmerica discusses findings from our latest American Climate Perspectives Survey: <https://youtu.be/k7kFJJJef04>

Facebook Posts

A new American Climate Perspectives Survey by @ecoAmerica explores who Americans feel comfortable talking with about climate change, revealing that family and friends are at the top of the list. Read the full report here to learn more:

<https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

NEW RESEARCH: Who do you feel comfortable talking about climate change with? 67% of Americans feel comfortable talking to their family about the issue. Only 23% feel comfortable talking to elected officials. Read the latest American Climate Perspectives Survey to learn more:

<https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

@ecoAmerica's latest American Climate Perspectives Survey finds that 64% of American feel comfortable talking to their friends about climate change. What about family, coworkers, and other social groups? Dive into the findings here:

<https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

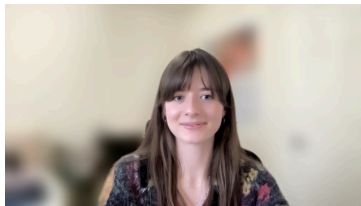

A new @ecoAmerica survey reveals that just under 3 in 10 Americans report feeling comfortable talking about the issue with coworkers (29%) and neighbors (27%). Less than 1 in 4 Americans feel comfortable talking to their elected officials (23%). Read the latest American Climate Perspectives Survey for more climate communication findings:

<https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

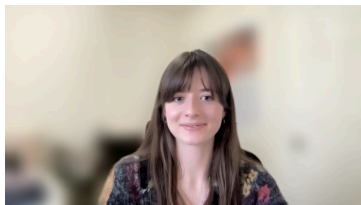

A new #LetsTalkClimate episode about @ecoAmerica's latest American Climate Perspectives Survey featuring Nicole Hill, MPH and Jennifer Giordano is available now on our YouTube channel! Take a look: <https://youtu.be/k7kFJIJef04>

@ecoAmerica's latest #LetsTalkClimate episode features a brief overview of the latest survey findings "Americans Feel Most Comfortable Talking About Climate Change with Friends and Family" with Nicole Hill, MPH and Jennifer Giordano. Discover the findings here:

<https://youtu.be/k7kFJIJef04>

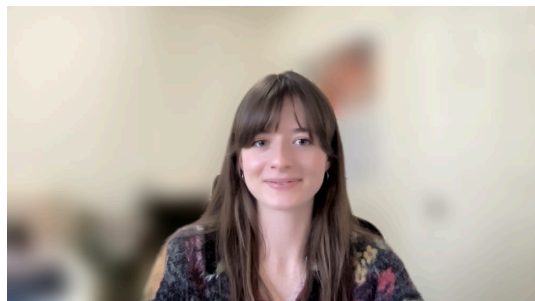

LinkedIn Posts

New survey findings are available for @ecoAmerica's network! This latest report explores who Americans feel comfortable talking with about climate change, revealing that family and friends are at the top of the list. But what about our professional network? Only 29% say they feel comfortable talking to co-workers about the issue. Read Americans Feel Most Comfortable Talking About Climate Change With Friends and Family to dive deeper into the findings. <https://ecoamerica.org/american-climate-perspectives-survey-2023-vol-ii-blog/>

New #LetsTalkClimate episode now available for @ecoAmerica's network! Learn about the latest American Climate Perspectives Survey, "Americans Feel Most Comfortable Talking About Climate Change with Friends and Family" with Nicole Hill, MPH and Jennifer Giordano. They cover the key findings, including that only 23% of Americans say they feel comfortable talking to elected officials about #ClimateChange. Take a look: <https://youtu.be/k7kFJIJef04>

Instagram Posts

NEW RESEARCH: Many climate activists have been working for years to transform climate change into a kitchen-table issue, and new research suggests these efforts have succeeded. ecoAmerica's latest report explores who Americans feel comfortable talking with about climate change, revealing that family and friends are at the top of the list. Read Americans Feel Most Comfortable Talking About Climate Change With Friends and Family to dive deeper into the findings. Available now in @eco_america's bio!

An all new #LetsTalkClimate episode is available! Learn about the latest American Climate Perspectives Survey, "Americans Feel Most Comfortable Talking About Climate Change with Friends and Family" with Nicole Hill, MPH and Jennifer Giordano. They cover the key findings, including that only 23% of Americans say they feel comfortable talking to elected officials about #ClimateChange. Take a look with the link in @eco_America's bio!

