This does not surprise me. It's only our arrogance that asserts we are the only ones in the universe.

This is the first time I've seen something that seemed credible, especially the two (of four) pilots. Whether its terrestrial or not, who knows, but it was convincing that there are seriously things that even the military can't identify.

This doesn't surprise me but I can't explain why I've believed there is something unexplainable. Maybe it's because of my faith. Since childhood, I've believed in UFOs.

The report did not change my view. Like others, I believe in the possibility that we're not the only thinking beings in existence. The events could also be very advanced technology fielded by a government that is not acknowledged.

The report did not change my mind. Space is too vast, stars and planets nearly infinite, and possibilities endless. Life exists outside our solar system. The real surprise is coming all this way to check us out and never staying long. What does that say?? Greg Z
