4. China Scholastic Competency Assessment Transcript

All applicants must participate in the China Scholastic Competency Assessment, which will primarily be conducted through online testing. Including four subjects: major Chinese, mathematics, physics and chemistry.

① Major Chinese

Major Chinese offers two types of tests: liberal arts Chinese and science Chinese. Applicants who apply for undergraduate studies taught in Chinese should take the corresponding major Chinese test based on the category of your applied major. Applicants applying for undergraduate degree education taught entirely in English do not need to take the major Chinese test.

② Basic subjects

All applicants must take mathematics test. According to different majors, applicants must participate in tests for physics and chemistry after confirming with Northeast Forestry University.

③ Language used for testing

Assessments for mathematics, physics, and chemistry are available in both Chinese and English. Applicants can choose the language of the test paper based on the teaching language.

The first time of assessment will start on December 21, 2025, and registration will be open in November 2025. Subsequent assessments will be held in January, March, April, June, and December every year.
