

Volcano Narrative: Hook

We have been discussing how to HOOK your reader in your opening paragraph. Now, let's try it out using the narrative you wrote in class about the two volcanoes!

1. The type of hook that I am going to use is:
2. Copy and paste the first paragraph of your narrative below. Then, in a different colour font, change the beginning of your paragraph using the hook you chose above.

3. Click to Make an Appointment to see Mrs. Moala to discuss the changes you have made. Once your changes have been ok'd, go on to steps 4 and 5.

STOP!!! Do not go to Step 4 until Mrs. Moala tells you to.

4. Copy and paste your new "HOOKed" paragraph and post it on your blog. Title your post HOOKS in Narrative Writing Don't forget to use labels like:

Writing, Narrative, Mrs. Moala, Writing, 2016, Team 4

5. Don't forget to tell your blog readers what you have done above your narrative paragraph! For example: DO NOT COPY THIS!!

This week in writing, I have been learning to HOOK my readers by using different HOOK strategies in my writing. I have taken my volcano narrative and spent some time working to add a new HOOK in the opening sentences. The HOOK I have chosen to try is:
