

flags.risd.gd is a repository of student designs created in the fall 2017 RISD Graphic Design course “Design Studio 1”. The project looks at flags as one application of symbolic language. Symbols can connect (or distance) a group of people. Whether for nations, towns, labor unions, or schools, flags make use of the simplest of forms to communicate various cultural, historical or aspirational qualities of a group. See the full assignment

Credits

Flags and descriptions were submitted by students and credited as each student requested.

flags.risd.gd began as a project within The Web & Democracy course, a fall 2017 elective taught by RISD Assoc. Prof. John Caserta.

Design and Development of the website was by Mostyn Griffith (mgriffith@risd.edu) and Ethan Anderson. Production assistance by Grace Young.

Contact

Questions may be directed to the instructor/adviser of the project, jcaserta@risd.edu